DURING THE fire that devastated much of the Huckleberry Hill section of Pebble Beach Sunday, violent fire storms swept through the area leaving little time for escape. For wheelchair-bound John Clarke, who escaped injury, the scene was almost catastrophic, with resuce teams arriving only three minutes before his house on El Bosque Drive went up in smoke. Here, his son Skip examines the remains of his father's charred wheelchair. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Residents try to put lives back together after devastation

By DAVID LELAND

A FIRE that swept through a quiet Pebble Beach neighborhood late Sunday afternoon, causing millions of dollars in damage, may best be remembered by firefighters for its violent fire storms and uncontrollable fury.

Fanned by an on-shore wind upwards of 40 mph, what began as a small brushfire in mid-afternoon soon blazed out of control, leaving firemen helpless against flames that would damage more than 40 houses before the fire was contained the next day.

The fire resulted from a "negligent campfire" in S.F.B. Morse Botanical Reserve, according to the California Department of Forestry. Fires are not allowed in the reserve.

While news media covering the fire quickly blamed the 160-acre fire on youths partying at the site, the CDF was noncommital.

"We have an on-going investigation," said Mark Stanley, CDF fire information officer. "It could have been started by anybody — adults, transients or students."

Stanley said youths were immediately blamed because the spot is a popular teenage hangout and several bottles of unopened Miller Draft beer were found by the abandonded campsite, suggesting a fast exit.

When firefighters first discovered the blaze at 3:30 p.m. they thought they could contain the small fire, but after it "spotted" several times it quickly blew out of control and other agencies were called. But by that time all firemen could do was watch as the fire spread and houses began to burn.

"The fire department made a good stand, but in some areas they were driven out," said Charlie Wilkens, Pacific Grove fire chief. "I drove my car through fire just to get the hell out. It was a total fire storm."

Wilkens said that in one instance firefighters cut their hoses with an axe so they could evacuate their position when the fire spread unexpectedly toward the fire engine.

The CDF estimated property loss at more than $16 million.

Late Monday afternoon Sen. Henry Mello said that Gov. George Deukmejian declared the fire zone an official disaster area, which qualifies residents for low-income federal loans.

Locally, the Carmel Fire Department responded to the county's mutual aid agreement with two engines, a public works water tanker and 11 men at 4:55 p.m., according to Capt. Bill Hill, Carmel Fire Department. They returned to Carmel at 1:40 a.m.

Fire agencies from as far away as Kentfield in Marin County, north of San Francisco, responded to help fight the blaze, with 884 men joining in. There were 21 separate crews, one bulldozer and a helicopter also used in the battle.

The Collins Polo Field in Pebble Beach resembled the railroad scene from the classic film Gone With The Wind early Monday morning.

Exhausted firefighters were fed meals donated by the Red Cross and served in Salvation Army canteen trucks. Some skipped the meal, choosing instead to sleep on the Fire safety

Dear Editor:

True innovation makes government programs do what they are intended to do. It is time to crank up fire safety and services. In Carmel, we need a better set-up to quickly stop the spread of a big fire.

Rescue or ravish?

Dear Editor:

Dispassionate yet persuasive, Howard Nieman's guest editorial May 21 shows our plight to be precariously on the verge of descent to a lesser status. It's one thing to play the saucy rustic young tart, quite another to be a hyprocritical bedizened old courtesan. Come to think of it, we may already have surged that verge. Where were you, Howard Nieman, when we needed a mayor who would rescue not ravish?

Unsung hero

Dear Editor:

We believe that a gross omission was made in the May 14th coverage of this year's Monterey Concours d'Elegance.

Meals On Wheel's volunteer, Chuck Poland, should definitely have been given some recognition for all the hard work he put into gathering volunteers to man the various food and beverage stands. A lot of time and effort was given by him to make this event a success.

Parking solutions

Dear Editor:

Lest anyone misinterpret the remarks attributed to me in last week's Pine Cone on the subject of parking, let me extend and clarify them. I do not believe that residents coming into town for shopping or other errands should have to pay to park. The people we need to get off the streets and into parking facilities are the all-day parkers and tourists, thereby making free curbside spaces available for residents and other short-term parkers.

A parking structure at Sunset seems to be the best way to accomplish this in any magnitude. While it may be possible to have such a facility built at no cost to the town other than the commitment of land, people who use it will still have to pay reasonable parking fees.

The city council is to receive proposals for such a structure from several sources. Presumably all of them will include marketing plans for making sure it is used. We don't have to accept any of them and the public will be able to scrutinize all of them before a decision is made.

If and when such an alternative exists, I hope we can find means to curtail or eliminate non-resident parking in the area immediately surrounding the business district.

On freedom

Dear Editor:

I think Mayor Eastwood, in his Mayor's Report of May 28, actually was addressing the subject of freedom. I'd like to speak to that too.

The rights and liberties man possessed in a state of nature, he transferred by contract on becoming a part of the larger whole: the country, the state, the city. And membership, even that of a small community, makes it clear through reason that civil society's advantages certainly place all men under quite different and some very special conditions if that community is to be both peaceful and protective of them.

Much of the time, most of the time on analysis, the measures taken in support of that protection will surely seem punitive, and quite possibly invasive of his privacy as well. No community is going to guarantee you the unrestricted right to whatever you've a mind to do. The individual, asked which he will choose, tyranny or anarchy, will probably reply as Socrates did when asked whether he would rather injure or be injured: "Rather neither." Anarchy, absolute liberty of the individual, is outside both our experience and our comprehension.

All human societies are made up of governments with the equivalent of laws of nature like gravity, and out of those natural laws came our civil laws (ordinances too). You can do what you want provided you pay your taxes (you don't argue with gravity, do you?), go to war, get your vaccination, go to school, marry one woman at a time, don't park overtime, don't dump your garbage in the street, and don't cry "fire" in a crowded theater. Do I have the right to be a pig? Isn't it plain common sense to do no wrong to another, though it might be legal?

Should you decide otherwise, you run the risk of losing your privacy, your property, and perhaps even your life. That's the situation of man versus the state.

Responsive resource

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the Del Monte Revisited Committee, we wish to thank The Carmel Pine Cone for its support. The event, sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art and the Naval Postgraduate School, was a great success and we could not have done it without you!

Margye Neswitz is to be especially commended. As always, her interest in community events goes well beyond the demands of her job. During the entire planning process she lent her professional expertise to our effort.

The peninsula is fortunate indeed to have a resource as responsive as The Carmel Pine Cone and its wonderful staff.

GUEST EDITORIAL

By Gunnar Norberg

A treasured dream?

AFTER GOING through the "Duffy report" — the first in a series — prepared by the consulting firm Denise Duffy & Associates for the city of Carmel at its request, that report's conclusions simply look to me like the humdrum blueprint for some faltering Podunk's step-by-step guide to humdrum tomorrows.

And somehow the Duffy report (Denise Duffy and Associates) makes it seem reasonable and even right for Carmel to accept burgeoning commercialization as the new norm.

If you're one of those who is ready to accept more and more commercialization, you might say it's about time that Carmel begins to realize that it can't rightly consider itself as the residential city it once was.

And what can I say to refute that?

It was back in 1929 that Carmel founders decided to put in writing a credo which would set the direction and chart the city's course. And this is what it says:

"Carmel is essentially, predominantly, and primarily a residential city in which business and commerce have been, are now, and are proposed to be in the future subordinated to its residential character..."

Let's now see just what the Duffy report has to say under the heading of Commercial Land Uses:

"About 72 percent of all retail businesses consist of five major uses that are considered visitor-serving: Apparel stores, restaurants, art galleries, gift-novelty stores, and jewelry stores.

"Approximately 81 percent of sales in Carmel-by-the-Sea are made by businesses that are primarily oriented to visitors."

Meanwhile "there has been a general decrease in resident-serving business — gas stations, hobby-craft stores, medical-dental offices, and book-and-stationery stores."

And what's the reason for all this? Duffy says:

"Retail vacancy rates are low and rents are high" and there's "Strong demand for retail space by new businesses" and such retail space becomes available because of "business failures or relocations."

And what is the effect of those business failures as far as the city's residents are concerned? Because of those failures, we have only three grocery stores left in town and only one single hardware store, and just recently we lost the last regular barber shop.

The Duffy report sheds no tears over the loss of more and more residentially useful businesses. Instead it points out that "The visitor-oriented portion of Carmel's economy appears to be more stable and subject to fewer sales fluctuations.. than do resident-serving businesses."

And Duffy drives home its argument with this heartless block buster: "Sales of merchandise from visitor-oriented businesses rose from 71 percent of total sales in 1975 to 81 percent in 1984."

Duffy's next heading is Existing Traffic Conditions under which it reports that "During a typical week, weekday traffic peaks between 3 and 4 p.m.," while "Saturdays and Sundays generally exhibit peak periods which extend from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Next Duffy discusses traffic tie-ups and puts it like this: "Reasons for the delays include heavy pedestrian crossing activity, truck loading and delivery, double parking, limited sight distance for conflicting movements, and driver confusion related to traffic control."

Because of state law, double parking of trucks can't be forbidden, and such trucks often make it all but impossible for traffic to move at all at busy periods. And that situation can of course only get more and more out of hand if more and ever more commercialization is accommodated — something which, as we have seen, Duffy encourages and accepts as inevitable.

Meanwhile Duffy found that "67 percent of business owners surveyed indicated that goods delivery was accomplished from a double-parked vehicle, and that drivers tend to make multiple deliveries from one position which heightens the perception of abuse of rules and regulations..."

Not only is this a "heightened perception of abuse," but also it exasperates and angers Carmel residents who find themselves the innocent victims of a growing over-commercialization which they have never sought and which constantly offends them.

And the tie-ups and the congestions and traffic jams that we already have are only a beginning, says Duffy.

Soon 21 proposed projects may get under way and those will add further to the fury of Carmel residents. And that won't be all, Duffy seems gleefully to prophesy when it announces what Carmel residents would see as a new catastrophe: "The potential for similar development to occur in the future is relatively high, given the existing mixture of one-and-two story uses, and therefore the potential for increased traffic at key intersections could be significant," but adds Duffy as a sop to the already suffering Carmelites that "the cumulative impacts would not occur overnight."

UNDER THE Land Use Inventory heading, Duffy acknowledges that the City's General Plan indicates that Carmel residents feel "not only that there is too much commercial use in the city, but that the mix is not appropriate for a residential-serving community."

Next Duffy got back on track by getting the emphasis on the emerging wonders of commercialization by announcing that "the business district that once served the needs of the local community now has a service area of a much larger scope, namely the visitor population frequenting Carmel."

Speaking of survival, one afternoon as I was hurrying to get to the bank before it closed, I was nearly hit twice in the dizzying, criss-crossing traffic race at the Seventh and San Carlos intersection.

And now I can only hope that some day soon no Duffy consultant will be sought or needed and that long-suffering Carmel residents will again come into possession of the miracle community which all the world treasured and can then treasure again.

Architectural plans for garage get underway

By DAVID LELAND

IT IS unclear just what the design will be, how many stories or what the cost, but one thing is for sure: architectural proposals for construction of an underground parking garage at the north end of Sunset Center are underway.

The Carmel City Council Tuesday moved on with its push to provide more parking in Carmel, one of Mayor Clint Eastwood's campaign promises more than a year ago.

The council's unanimous vote calls for bids to be submitted by Aug. 7 to the city clerk. Guidelines for the proposals were set in a special council meeting held May 18.

Prior to that there had been some doubt how an architect would be selected to do the job, with the council receiving one formal bid and three architectural firms expressing interest in constructing a garage.

One of the barriers for a garage was lifted May 27 when the Carmel Planning Commission found that the structure was in conformance with the city's general plan.

But even though the council approved a measure to accept proposals and the planning commission had taken its action, there was an air of concern expressed at Tuesday's meeting by some residents.

"The public has had very little input into this, thanks to one member of the planning commission who has foregone the Brown Act," said said Ann Woolworth.

Woolworth said she was referring to planning commissioner Ed Hicks, who set up several meetings for presentations to commissoners and councilmembers by EMC Planning Group, a Monterey architectural firm which had presented a formal bid to the city.

None of these meetings were public, nor was the public notified.

"We feel the garage should be put on the ballot," she said. Woolworth also said she questioned how many people would have responded positively to a 1985 questionnaire on the garage if they had known the cost.

Because there are no bids or design, the city has no cost estimates to present at this time, which is part of the reason for accepting proposals.

But just what constitutes a proposal as valid remains unclear, according to resident Francis "Skip" Lloyd.

"The problem I see is nobody knows what the city will accept as an acceptable proposal," he told the council. "The public has not had an opportunity to express its opinion."

But councilmembers appeared more concerned with getting the process started and worrying about public input once they had a product to present.

"The primary concern is that we go ahead and accept plans," said Councilman Bob Fischer. "We have to look at a number of variety of plans."

But Councilman Jim Wright also questioned whether the council had given the proposal makers enough options.

"My concern is it doesn't seem to me that we encourage proposals to provide us with more than one alternative," he said. "It's kind of a take it or leave it situation."

Also at the meeting Jean White of the cultural commission told the council the commission's concerns on the proposed multi-level garage.

These included: easy access to Sunset Center, a contract so season ticket holders to events can use the garage at no cost and that there is adequate parking for concertgoers.

Eastwood tried to allay the public's fears that there would not be sufficient input.

"There will be tremendous public exposure as the proposals come in," he said.

Council approves 45-day moratorium on second stories

By DAVID LELAND

SECOND-STORY building permits within the commercial district were halted Tuesday afternoon as the Carmel City Council unanimously approved a moratorium so the matter can be further studied.

The 45-day urgency ordinance follows a unanimous decision May 27 by the Carmel Planning Commission, which also said it needs more time to review city policy on second stories.

"The planning commission is asking for some breathing room," said Ken White, chairman of the planning commission. "We would like to spend some quality time on second stories in the commercial district."

The matter will be studied at a planning commission level.

The planning commission came under fire recently when Ted and Bob Leidig appealed a planning commission decision last month before the council, which asked for more space above the Dansk building on Ocean Avenue for apartment construction.

The Leidigs were requesting an increase of about 1,500 square feet to provide for a maximum of six apartments.

At that time, the Leidigs cited the Goold Building directly across the street as being a similar project that had been given approval by the commission.

They questioned why one would receive a permit while the other would not.

The rationale made by the city planning department, according to Brian Roseth, staff planner, was that the Goold property already had two stories when it was granted its application by the planning commission.

While the council denied their appeal, Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo suggested a moratorium on second stories in the commercial district until some uniform code could be found.

Under the urgency ordinance adopted at its meeting June 2, there will be three projects immediately affected, according to Diane White, planning director.

These are the Leidigs' permit to remodel the Dansk Building at Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street, which has already been granted building permits so it may procede; the Goold Building, which is currently under construction at San Carlos and Sixth Avenue; and the Village Corner restaurant, which is under planning review and would be halted.

During his brief presentation to the council, planning chairman White cited several reasons the planning commission felt it needed some time to delve into the second story issue.

First off, beginning six months ago when it began receiving second-story applications there was "unease" at the commission due to the possible long-term visual affects on downtown.

Secondly, there has been a great deal of concern expressed by residents at the general plan hearings regarding the buildup of the downtown area, which needs to be taken into account.

Lastly, the commission wished to take up Laiolo on her suggestion at May's council meeting asking for a moratorium.

"We want to study the issue very carefully," White said.

The only opposing view regarding the moratorium came from resident Josie Tracy, who said she has a friend looking for an apartment in the downtown area and can't find one.

"I believe there is a real need for apartment living in the center of town," she said. "I think the second stories I've seen really enhance the way the village looks."

UNDER THE urgency ordinance enacted by the the council this week, the Leidigs will be allowed to build a second story at the Dansk location because they already have a permit, but no other applications for second stories in the commercial district will be accepted for 45 days. Water board to determine whether vote on dam needed

By NANCY HILLS

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District is scheduled to settle the question of whether to have an advisory vote in November on the proposed New San Clemente Dam.

The district board of directors should vote on the issue at its 7:30 p.m., Monday, June 8 meeting in Monterey City Council Chambers.

According to water managment district General Manager Bruce Buel, the board will discuss a proposed ballot measure which reads: "Shall the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board be directed to move forward with a plan (as described in the voter's pamphlet) to build a new dam on the Carmel River in order to increase the water supply?"

The wording, however, could be changed at the meeting, Buel cautioned.

The vote will cost the district only $300, Buel said, since the district is already conducting an election on three board member seats in November.

"That's a minor cost compared with a survey which would be $10,000 to $15,000," he added.

Opponents of the advisory vote have suggested the district do a survey instead of a ballot measure because it is less binding. They have worried that an incomplete report will jeopordize a "yes" response from residents.

The district board decided late last year when it was informed by staff that the bond election would probably not be until 1988. That was the earliest the district could complete its hearing before the State Water Resources Board. Since the resources board hearings could change the project, a final vote, which is binding, cannot be held until that process is completed.

If voters decline the dam, Buel said the district would have to rely on other means to increase the supply.

The final vote on the dam, the vote on the bond, should be in late 1988 or early 1989. If approved, the earliest completion date for the dam would be 1992.

By this November, Buel said, the board should have decided on a specific dam size. Right now, the district is looking at a range from 16,000 acre feet to 29,000 acre feet. Those sizes are being analyzed in the project's environmental impact report, which was started in 1983.

Included in the description will be the dam size, possible benefits, financing, location and phasing of the water yield, Buel said.

Current estimates on the 30-year bond to finance the project is $50 million for the approximately $43 million project. That would add about $4 to $5 dollars a month to the average water bill, Buel said. In addition, new connections charges will pay for 33 percent of the bond and interest on the reserve fund another 33 percent.

ALSO SCHEDULED on the agenda is a first reading of a districtwide water conservation ordinance.

Changes from the first drafts of the ordinances include making all businesses, not only hotels and motels, install water conservation kits within 120 days from when the ordinance takes effect. This means all commercial uses, at their own expense, would install aerators for faucets, toilet dams and, where there is a shower, low-flow shower heads.

Other provisions include:

- All new construction, commercial and residential, must be fitted with ultra-low flow fixtures, 1.5-gallon or less per flush toilets, 2.5-gallon or less per minute showerheads and faucet aerators.
- All existing businesses and residences must retrofit to ultra-low flow fixtures within 30 days of a change of ownership. Any remodel of more than 25 percent of floor area also must retrofit.
- The district is requesting that all cities within its boundaries and Monterey County adopt "companion" conservation ordinances.

The program also includes a water conservation kit distribution program free to residents, but Buel said funding negotiations are continuing with the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency.

Originally, the district hoped it would split a portion of the $650,000 program cost with the pollution control agency, but Buel said the two agencies have different goals for timing and benefits of the program. The water management district, he said, may do the program on its own.

The pollution control agency, Buel said, would like to do a pilot program in Pacific Grove and wait to see the results, while the water management district would like it to be districtwide and not conduct a pilot program. A similar kit distribution system was successfully done in San Jose.

Also, the pollution control agency wishes to only distribute the kits to single-family residences and the water district wants to distribute to all residences.

Residents pick up pieces after devastation grassy field as helicopters hovered nearby ferrying county and state officials to survey the devastation.

There were 15 minor injuries to firemen reported by CDF and three minor fire-related injuries to private citizens.

Firemen faught a losing battle trying to save houses throughout Sunday evening and early Monday morning, eventually losing 31 totally, according to CDF. Six houses suffered minor damage and four had minor outer building destruction.

"We can safely say that that's the most damaging fire Pebble Beach has ever had," said Don Stacy, CDF fire prevention officer.

Only a fire in 1959 in Pebble Beach that charred 62 acres compares with Sunday's fire, which destroyed more than 140 acres. But the 1959 fire did not claim any houses.

•

MONDAY AFTERNOON residents from hard-hit areas of Sunset Lane and El Bosque Drive ventured back to the area looking stunned.

Firefighters and police agencies had evacuated 200 residents as the flames neared Sunday night, placing many in the gym at Monterey Peninsula College and others at the Hilton in Monterey, which provided free rooms for fire victims.

What the residents found on their return was an eerie blend of blackened remains of homes, contrasted with some dwellings that were virtually unscathed by the tradgedy.

Hill, of the Carmel fire department, called that picture "typical." He said it's a matter of topography, the type of roof and whether the resident cleared the brush from around the house.

There is also a matter of luck figured in, according to Wilkens of PG, pointing at an immaculate home left untouched by the fire.

He said the firemen happened to be parked in that driveway and were able to combat the flames while other homes could not be saved.

Less fortunate residents, however, returned to what had been their homes with dramatic stories of desperate attempts to save valuables.

There was not really much warning, according to Monterey Police Officer Joe Panetta, who lived with his parents at 4028 Sunset Lane. That house was totally destroyed by the fire.

"All of a sudden we saw a helicopter dropping water 200 yards to our left," said Panetta, who was dressed in a blue sweatsuit he had brought from the house. "Then we saw flames coming through the trees and we left."

•

BEFORE LEAVING, Panetta first had attempted to wet down the wooden shingle roof with a garden hose. But he quickly found that that was no match for a raging brushfire.

"I had the hose in my hand," said Panetta, whose brother John is an officer with the Carmel Police Department. "I looked at it (the fire) and it was like spitting at a giant."

Panetta then spent the rest of the night evacuating residents along with off-duty Monterey Sheriff's Deputy Pat Homan.

The two dodged raging fire storms and pulled people from their homes and the smoke.

"The smoke was so thick there wasn't enough oxygen to start my truck," Homan said.

Unbelievable as it may seem, there were no deaths or serious injuries reported by CDF, even though several residents removed were wheelchair-bound or invalids and were not aware of the danger surrounding them.

After working for 12 hours straight, Panetta finally napped for an hour early Monday morning. Upon waking, it occurred to him just what had transpired.

"I'm suprised there wasn't anybody dead," he said. "When I woke up it hit me — I was in a fire storm."

The Panettas are nephews of Rep. Leon Panetta of Carmel Valley.

Fire officials said it took less than one hour for the expensive homes to be burnt to the ground.

But for John Cardinalli of Monterey, the destruction of his home had a silver lining of sorts. He had bought the home a month ago and was supposed to move in Friday — two days before the fire.

Cardinalli said remodeling had delayed his wife and him from moving into their new home. He said no valuables were destroyed.

YOUTHS FROM the California Conservation Corps worked through Sunday night and into Monday combating "spot" fires which sprang up after the Pebble Beach blaze. (Pat Hathaway photo.)

"Luckily we haven't rented out our Monterey home yet," he said. "We didn't find out it was our house that burnt down until late last night."

The address? "It would have been 4055 Sunset Lane," he said.

Residents from nearby neighborhoods in Pebble Beach wandered through the rubble during the day, appearing almost as stunned as those victims returning to their homes.

For Bob and Jane Larson of 4041 Los Altos, the devastation resembled a scene from the Twilight Zone as they stared at a Sunset Lane house they used to live in.

There was one wall left — smoke still rose in thin wisps from the piles of charred embers.

"It's unreal," said Jane Larson, who said they lived in the home for three years. "We were just here last night. It was so beautiful."

The two shook their heads and stared.

"You don't see it for awhile, then you come back and it's history," Bob said.

EVEN AFTER homes were totally destroyed by Sunday's blaze they continued to smolder, prompting firemen to keep the area moist. (Pat Hathaway photo.)

Combination of factors added fuel to the fire

By NANCY HILLS

IT WAS a night when the beauties of Paradise transformed into the fuel for infernos of Hell.

Tall older Monterey Pines, thick undergrowth, a warm sunny day, sea breezes and a campfire all combined to turn what peninsulans usually praise into the enemy and turn what is most often despised into the hero.

On a tour of the devastated area Monday with Monterey County 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, Roy Perkins, California Department of Forestry Chief Ranger for the San Benito-Monterey County area, points to a stand of still smoking trees — once green foliage and now towering sticks — blackened to the top.

"This was really hot, definitely a hot spot," Perkins said, looking up a portion of the hill directly below the burned homes on Los Altos Drive.

A "hot spot," where temperatures can reach "a couple of thousand degrees," Perkins explained, is created by many different conditions. The way the wind blows, the undergrowth, the shape of the land.

Most of the trees would die, Perkins said, especially if they were brown at the top.

"The bigger trees if not burned at the base could survive," he added. Pointing to a larger pine, charred only on one side he said it might make it. However, smoke still rising from the burns indicate that it was still smoldering. "Maybe not," he mused.

But even in such wreckage, nature has her positive ways.

"The Monterey Pine is what we call a 'closed cone' pine," Perkins explained. "Its pine cone is tightly closed and can remain that way for years. The fire opens those cones and the seeds spread on the ground."

Once up on Los Altos Drive, the devastation was stunning.

For Strasser Kauffman, passing by ash heaps that remained of her former neighbors' homes was grim, poignant and shocking.

"These were my neighbors, my friends," she said.

Strasser Kauffman's first family home after her marriage was located down the street.

Perkins looked down on a depression that ran up the hillside in front of a lone stucco home that survived.

"This (ravine) turned into and made its own chimney," he said, with concentrated heat blowing up the ravine as in a home fireplace. The trees were blackened from base to crown. The wind and the fire topping the trees had made a wall of flame that swept over the homes — a fire storm.

But the home stood, inside flowers still in vases and furnishings undisturbed. And that's what Perkins wanted the supervisor to see.

Looking at the modern-style home with an asphalt-like roof, Perkins said, "I don't know if this guy knew what he was doing (when he built it,) but he did almost everything right."

A stucco wall fronting the house protected the home, Perkins said, deflecting the heat. The house's clean lines, no eaves or flammable protuberances helped too. That and the non-flammable material of the walls gave the fire little to get a hold on.

"Heat collects under overhangs like an eave," Perkins said. Even with a fire-resistant roof, overhangs can help combust the home.

Walking along the back, where the roof came close to the hill, Perkins pointed to hundreds of small burned-out embers that flecked the asphalt. "They couldn't catch on this material. See how this one melted into the roof."

Around the corner, he came to a wooden deck with charred holes in it.

"Someone had a hose here," he said. But the construction still helped save that area too. The stucco wall ran in front of the deck. Looking underneath, Perkins said that heat could collect in that area and start it burning, but the wall and a glass enclosure around the top of the deck helped prevent that occurence. Lawn furniture, including an umbrella, sat undisturbed on the deck.

RETURNING TO where she used to live at 4049 Los Altos Drive, 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman found her former abode — which she had lived in for four years before moving to Carmel Valley — just a memory. (Holly McFarland photo.)

"I want to see our first home," she explained. It was not a happy reunion.

"Oh...oh...look at this, look at this," she said. There was nothing left but a few twisted hunks of metal, a driveway and green retaining wall against the hill next to the driveway.

Walking through the rubble, she could only find a piece of the bathroom tile.

"I wallpapered these walls," she said, standing next to a large beam, now a hunk of charcoal. "It's shocking to see a house that was so solid reduced to this." The house was made of wood she said, and admitted she and her husband never thought about the danger of forest fires when they lived there.

Her heart went out, she said, to the people who had lived there.

In the driveway, Perkins picked up another reason he is against wood shingle roofs. While still burning, the severely-burned chunk of shingle he held in his hand could fly through the air on convection currents for 300 or 400 feet, land and ignite another area or home, Perkins said.

The twisted, almost unrecognizable gas meter at the house demonstrated another problem.

Even after the house was no longer burning, Perkins said, you could see a single flame rising from each home's meter.

"We (the fireman) don't put those out," he said. Pacific Gas & Electric came up during the blaze, dug up their lines and turned off gas to the area.

Driving up to El Bosque Drive, Strasser Kauffman indicated a completely devastated home.

Planners find theater too big, but garage OK

By NANCY HILLS

WITH A 5-1 vote May 27, the Carmel Planning Commission found that the proposed Stanton Theater for Sunset Center too big for Carmel and in the next item unanimously found a much-debated parking garage on the north field just fine.

The vote on the parking garage was not a review of any specific proposal, but was only the commission's recommendation to the city council on whether a parking facility at the field is in compliance with the city's general plan (see related story this issue).

The theater agenda item, however, was in response to the revival of an almost 14-year-old proposal for a 1,500-seat facility designed by well-known peninsula architect Robert Stanton. Stanton, a Carmel Valley resident and architect/owner of the Normandy Inn, died in 1983.

Gordon Smith, a director of the Friends of Sunset Center, said in an interview the next day that the vote did not put the project on the shelf and that the organization will continue fund raising efforts and in developing the concept with various city organizations.

The Friends of Sunset Center is raising funds to build the approximately $1.2 million cultural center and provide an endowment for its operation so it would be of no cost to the city, Smith explained.

The commission's vote is a recommendation to the city council, which makes the final determination.

Chairman Ken White was the lone voice in favor of a theater on the the south end of Sunset Center, citing the possible loss of cultural events to other peninsula facilities if Carmel does not build a larger site.

"If we do (lose cultural events), I'm afraid we will become what people say we are — a community of T-shirt shops," White said.

But parking requirements and disturbance to the surrounding residential community were paramount to the other commissioners.

Robert Coffin, president of Friends of Sunset Center, addressed the commission, stating that the 1,500-seat theater would not be feasible without a parking facility in the north field.

"We need 750 dedicated parking spaces," Coffin said, and explained that the organization has "no intention of putting a garage underneath the theater" due to vibration, noise and danger from fire.

Coffin proposed that the city build a parking lot next to theater on the south end which should include dedicated parking for the conductor, orchestra and guest performers.

Staff planner Brian Roseth's assessment of the general plan concurred with Coffin's statements about the theater being dependent on a parking garage in the north field.

Roseth told the commissioners that "construction of a 1,500-seat theater probably would be inconsistent with the general plan unless additional parking facilities were also provided..."

But even with a garage on the opposite end of Sunset Center, the commissioners were concerned about its impact on the surrounding residential community.

Roseth's report also states compliance with the general plan would depend on whether the commissioners felt the current theater and rooms at Sunset Center were "adequate" and if there is a need for the new addition.

Roseth based his comments on the Socio-Cultural Element of the general plan, which states that the city should "promote and assist in the maintenance of the Sunset Community and Cultural Center to provide adequate facilities for town meetings and events related to governmental, social, recreational and cultural activities."

"The needs for local interests, as far as I'm concerned, and those of Carmel residents are not served by a 1,500-seat facility," said Commissioner Fred Keeble, referring to the direction of the general plan. "If by community you take in the whole peninsula, that's one thing, but if you mean by community, Carmel residents, then I do not feel this is in concurrance with the general plan."

Carmel couldn't fill the theater for a town hall meeting, Keeble said, "even if it was to complain about the planning commission."

"The commission makes a lot of sense," said White said after listening to similar statements by other commissioners. "What's bothering me is that we are so lucky to live in a cultural community. I see so many things possible to lose if we don't build this theater. We might lose the symphony, we might — I say might — lose the Bach (Festival). Because of those things, I do find the theater concept within the philosophy of the general plan."

"I hate to say this, but if these events are too large for the Carmel theater, they've gotten too large for this community," Keeble responded.

Other commissioners agreed, thoug expressed concern about losing the events.

"When you have a project like this, I think it should be put to a referendum," Commissioner Bruce Roberts said.

"I'm strongly in favor of that," White said.

With White casting the dissenting vote, the commission ended the item by voting 5-1 that the theater was not in compliance with the general plan.

Valley residents wary of Monterra development

By DAVID LELAND

EVEN THOUGH part of the proposed Monterra Ranch subdivision is no longer included in the Carmel Valley Master Plan, Carmel Valley residents are bemoaning its potential problems.

At hand is a building application by Hanover Monterra Investors II calling for the division of 2,911 acres into 283 residential housing lots, located east of Jacks Peak Park on the south side of Highway 68.

A tentative map came before the Monterey County Planning Commission last week, with commissioners deciding to take a field trip before rehearing the issue June 24.

At one time, the area from the ridgeline down into the valley was included within the boundary of the master plan, but now that land is within the confines of the Monterey Area Land Use Plan.

One concern expressed by valley residents centers on a proposed Rancho de la Segunda Road, which would connect Highway 68 to Carmel Valley Road.

While currently the developers are only planning a road into the subdivision, some proponents of a major artery are pushing for abandonment of that idea in favor of a throughfare stretching over the ridge.

"Whether it gets built now is immaterial," said engineer Carl Hooper, who pleaded his case before the commissioners last week. "Someday we're going to need it."

Hooper believes that by not constructing a road that will expedite driving time through the Monterra Ranch and Carmel Valley, more traffic will build up along Highway 1 and Highway 68.

That, he said, will cause those roads to be widened to six lanes, which will cost the taxpayers money.

The idea of a connecting road is nothing new to the county Department of Public Works, which proposed construction of a 3.4 mile, two-lane road in 1978.

In that plan it was determined that travelling from Carmel Valley Road to Canada de la Segunda to Highway 68 going to Salinas would save about two miles as opposed to the Highway 1 route.

The plan was abandoned due to lack of funding, but it also was never clear whether the county could even get the right of way for privately owned land which would need to be purchased.

That land is currently owned by Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood and East Coast businessman Howard Morgens.

•

AND WHILE Hooper is trying to get that road included in the tentative plan approved by the planning commissioners, the idea also still lives in the public works department.

"A route from Carmel Valley (to Highway 68) may be necessary in the future," said Ron Lundquist, senior civil engineer. Lundquist said that public works is keeping a watchful eye on traffic patterns and will act accordingly.

Meanwhile, the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, fearing more development, has vowed to fight the proposed road.

"We are against it because it would open up the area to more development," said Robert Greenwood of the CVPOA.

While the Carmel Valley Master Plan has strict regulations limiting building in the valley for the next 20 years, Greenwood is not convinced that that will last forever.

"These plans can always be changed by another board of supervisors," he said. "These plans are not set in concrete."

Speaking for himself and not the CVPOA, Greenwood gave The Pine Cone his personal view on why a road is not a wise move.

"Many of us have the feeling that the more roads you put in, the more building you get," he said.

For their part, developers of the subdivision are content with a designed road which winds through the subdivision into a dead end.

Another primary concern expressed by the CVPOA is that one-third of the subdivision drains down into Carmel Valley.

While the steep ridge already erodes slightly during the rainy season, Greenwood said this would be exacerbated with building on the slopes.

Currently he said the hills are stabilized by vegetation and trees, but if houses are built on those slopes that will disappear.

The offshoot of erosion is increased sediment being dumped into the Carmel River, Greenwood said.

While the developer is supposed to monitor levels of pollution being produced by his development, the CVPOA still wants a building moratorium on the upper slopes.

"In our experience those things don't always get carried out," he said, referring to regulations going unheeded. "The county doesn't have the staff to regulate everything."

Settlement hearing set for Bank of Carmel case

By NANCY HILLS

IT COULD be the beginning of the end for National Bank of Carmel settlement on Friday, June 5.

At 11 a.m., Federal Judge Robert Aquiler will decide at a hearing in San Jose Federal Court if the settlement offered to the bank shareholders in February is acceptable.

So far, only 11 individuals — members of four different families — have declined to be a part of the settlement, attorney Nicole A. Crittenden said. Crittenden respresents a group of shareholders that purchased stock in the bank's 1984 offering.

All current information could change at the hearing, she cautioned, adding she didn't want to discourage anyone from appearing in court.

If the settlement goes through, the 1984 shareholders could get 40 cents for each dollar invested. The shares were selling then at $12.50 per share. Those who invested in the bank's stock prior to 1984 may receive 5 cents on the dollar.

Though it is not yet clear, it appears most of the families that refused the offer were in the pre-1984 group, she said.

How much is actually divided will depend on how many people file a claim. Crittenden said that the group will divide $1.2 million, some of it from insurance companies of the bank and the directors.

"It's a very complicated settlement," she said but one she feels is "a good result" for the shareholders.

If the settlement is accepted, the shareholders have until June 22 to file a claim. The defendents have 30 days from the hearing date to deposit the $1.2 million. After that, there will be "a little processing time" and then the money will be distributed.

Those who have not declined to participate in the settlement will waive any rights to further litigation against the directors of the bank. It will not affect other litigation currently in process or criminal charges against officers of the bank.

The bank was closed in 1984 by federal agencies because of a deficit of at least $6 million.

Parks agency to review Monastery parking plan

By DAVID LELAND

THE STATE Park and Recreation Commission will come to town next week, making its recommendation to the state regarding a proposed 75- to 100-car parking lot at Monastery Beach just off Highway 1.

During the past 45 days, parks department has reviewed comments from public, state and federal agencies regarding an amendment to the Carmel River State Beach portion of the Carmel River State Beach General Plan.

The proposed amendment provides 36 acres of land that was formally the Briggs property, located off Highway 1 slightly south of the Carmel Meadows housing subdivision, for a parking lot for beach goers and scuba divers.

But last spring a group of property owners adjacent to the property and representatives from Bay School, protested the lot, saying that the $1 million parking facility will create an eyesore.

The proposed lot will be paved and offer restrooms and showers.

The commission will meet at 9 a.m. Thursday, June 11 in Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center, located at Eighth Avenue and Mission Street.

Currently, weekends find the dirt shoulder of Highway 1 inundated with cars, while drivers park there and take the trails down to the beach.

But with the passage of the Carmel Area Land Use Plan in 1983, building a parking lot became a top priority for the state to rid the road of unsafe parking conditions.

Not only are the roadside conditions unsafe, but state park officials also are attempting to provide better posting of signs warning of heavy surf and riptides at the beach.

Monastery Beach is known for its high number of drownings and if there is one trail leading to the beach all hikers would be forewarned, according to Mary Gunter, parks district supervisor.

Even if the commission passes a favorable recommendation onto the state, a coastal development permit will still need to be issued.

Moreover, the matter will still be open for further public input at the coastal permit part of the process at the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

THE 36-acre parcel slated for a parking lot at Monastery Beach, south of Carmel on Highway 1, currently stands as an open field. Neighbors in the nearby Carmel Meadows subdivision have protested the potential viewshed disturbances to the state Parks and Recreation Commission. (David Leland photo.)

Carmel Valley planning process can now begin

By DAVID LELAND

IN ORDER to begin processing building applications within the perimeters of the Carmel Valley Master Plan, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors Tuesday approved an interim ordinance.

The master plan, which will govern the amount of building and the type of design within the valley over the next 20 years, was adopted by the board Dec. 16.

And May 5, Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver lifted a building moratorium within the valley that had existed for five years.

Now, while the county grapples with how exactly to carry out the plan by forming varying committees and ordinances, county planners say the process can begin.

"The purpose of the interim ordinance is to establish a process to enable processing of applications consistent with the Carmel Valley Master Plan," said Bob Slimmon, county planning director. "Including site and design control and the subdivision allocaton system..."

The interim will exist for 45 days.

Under the interim plan, a uniform process for review and consideration of projects can begin while county workers complete the implementation plan, which Slimmon said will be completed later this year.

The interim ordinance applies certain restrictions to development in those areas governed by the plan.

But the ordinance also says that minor developments will not be affected by the new law. These include:

- Maintenance, alteration or addition to existing single-family dwelling.
- Work done on non-habitable accessory structures.
- Replacement of any structures destroyed by natural disaster provided such replacement conforms to zoning requirements, be for the same use as the destroyed structure and are not more than 10 percent bigger than the destroyed structure.
- Projects undertaken by individual or agency as emergency measures to protect life and property during a natural disaster.
- New single-family dwellings on vacant lots of record, those infilling an established residential plan or have an adverse visual impact on the area.

All other special permits will be made with the planning department.

After a permit is applied for it will be reviewed by the zoning administrator. After that review, there will be a public hearing.

If a person is unhappy with the planning commission's decision they may appeal to the board of supervisors.

To show that they are serious, county planners have set penalties for people who attempt to circumvent the proscribed law.

Anyone violating the interim ordinance can be charged with a misdemeanor and can be fined up to $500 or jailed for six months.

For each day a person violates the ordinance they can be charged with an additional misdemeanor plus costs of investigation, court costs, attorney's fees and costs of monitoring compliance.

More second stories for Carmel planners

TED AND Bob Leidig may have to wait on second-story applications in the central commercial district, but the Court of the Fountains is in the service-commercial district — so an application for 12 second-story apartments will be heard by the Carmel Planning Commission June 10.

The meeting is scheduled for 3 p.m., Wednesday, June 10 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

Speakeasy revisited

SIXTY YEARS ago a popular pasttime was going up to a door and whispering through the peephole, "Joe (or was it Sam?) sent me" — thus entering the forbidden world of the bathtub gin speakeasy.

No such ritual was necessary last Saturday night. The Carmel Music Society celebrated its birth 60 years ago by revisiting the "flapper era" of the '20s in the inner mall at The Crossroads. Playing chips were issued, gaming tables were set up, and it was all in fun for the CMS.

Revelers were greeted at the door by Jackie and Don Craghead, Frank Tousignant and Lequita Watkins (event chairwoman). CMS president Marcia Norris and Ruth Stuckey held forth at the ticket table selling not only chips but tickets for corsages, drinks, photos, and dances.

Adding Roarin' '20s atmosphere were Genie Bell and her friends who handled the bars and sold liquors (in tiny bottles), flowers, chips on trays as "cigarette girls." MC Andrew Mayer had a swift tongue with the jokes. He introduced the two "taxi dancers" Genie Bell and Judy Olszewski a "dancers who actually go out and dance with taxis."

Suiting the rhythm of the evening was the Swing Fever orchestra direct from the "Black-and-White Ball" in big ole' San Fran. High above them dangled a mirrored ball typical of the era (furnished by Wells Fargo). One of the gaming tables was sponsored by Thom Beckman and Ventana. Jason Kaufmann of the award-winning Pacific Design Associates provided decoration.

For some time the Pacific Grove Lions Club members and friends felt the urge to return to the "age of elegance" and they decided to undertake the sponsorship of Tea Dances to raise money for the Monterey Peninsula Center for the Blind. Apparently, plenty of people were ready for a "Sunday treat for their dancing feet."

Tea dancing has been a great success!

Many times more than 170 have gathered to socialize and to swing to the big band sounds, including the young, who formerly were atuned to rock, enjoy touch dancing.

Last Sunday the new band The Moonlighters filled the San Carlos Ballroom at the Monterey Sheraton with great dance music. Local dance instructors bring their classes to the tea dances for practice sessions.

Greeting guests and taking tickets were Helen Fife and Helen and Ed Lgsakowski, Mary Pacini and others while Mario Pacini sat at the drums to keep the beat for bandleader Marty Baum.

Try it, you'll like it!

ANNUAL LUNCHEON FOR SYMPHONY GUILD

The vital support branch of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra — the Monterey County Symphony Guild — held its annual luncheon in the Pebble Beach Room in The Lodge. Guild goals are high and always are met and then some. They reported the largest contribution ever made to the orchestra — $80,500.

The Right Rev. Shannon Mallory of Carmel gave the invocation and Mrs. John A. Andrews Jr., guild president for the past two years, introduced guests at the head table and announced a new membership category for "life membership for couples" for $350 with a singles life membership at $250.

Mrs. Albert Taylor, chair of the luncheon, introduced the guest speaker Mrs. Joyce Wyman of Salinas who talked on health, cancer and the Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital (which recently dedicated a new wing in her name). When not in meetings for various boards she serves, she raises Arabian horses. In lieu of a personal gift, Mrs. Andrews presented a contribution to the hospital in Mrs. Wyman's name.

Nihla Knight presented the slate of new officers who were unanimously elected. The new board of officers for 1987-88 are: Mrs. Kenneth L. Booth, president; Mrs. Jacob J. Wick, second vp; Mrs. James M. Corbet, second vp; Mrs. John Kenaston third vp; Mrs. Edward McWilliams, recording secretary; Mrs. William Carhard, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Eileen Butler, treasurer; and Mrs. M.M. Reid, assistant treasurer. Elected board members for 1987-1990 are Mrs. Felix Gerace, Mrs. D. H. Johnson and Mrs. William D. Provost.

The new president, Elisa Booth, has lived here for 30 years and has been president of many cultural organizations in the past.

ENTRE NOUS

The new dorm of Robert Louis Stevenson School is coming along and will be open for students in September. It will be named in honor of Coach Wilson...Carmel Bach Festival offers "full week" season tickets or "split week" tickets for local patrons to attend new concerts a week for three weeks. Highlight this year will be Mozart's The Magic Flute...Peter Slovensky had to go about as far as you can go in this country to attend a family reunion — the state of Maine. It was worth it, he said...Mari Winsor, L.A. film/television choreographer,

DOLLARS & SENSE

By Anthony Piazza & Marshall Bloom

The Caper Concluded

Part III. Risk vs. Reward

"FIRE IN the kitchen!" Everybody out. Fire in the kitchen!"

The head cook, his chef's toque a-smoking, dashed through the swinging stainless steel doors and ran madly around the dining room. Startled diners dropped their forks and chopsticks and scrambled for the front door. Newly prepared plates of sweet and sour pork steamed quietly on abandoned tables.

Midway through her dissertation on the potential risks and rewards of the covered call strategy, Ardith the Amazing sat stunned for a moment before she realized the dining room was a chaotic scene of folks clumping toward the door. Her companions, Bloom and Piazza, were equally nonplussed. For a golden moment they were speechless: two wise investment cops with nothing to say.

"Stay seated. Do not move," said Ron the waiter who had just moments before the panic been grilling Ardith about the somewhat difficult to understand covered call strategy. It was he who had questioned her about the hazards inherent in what appeared to be a nifty enhanced income scheme.

"Don't move," he muttered again as the room finally emptied. "This is all a hoax. Fred Chung here, our cook, wanted to clear the joint out to spend a few minutes with Ardith."

"I realize," Fred began, "that this seems a bit extreme, faking a fire and all, but I had to get some answers myself from the Amazing Expositer," he nodded toward Ardith, "before she disappears yet again from our midst."

"Fire away with the questions," Piazza said, "Just keep the food coming."

Ignoring the last remark, the cook began, "Ron here tells me you've been pointing out the merits of selling options against stock for greater income and good total return versus the risk-free rate."

"And that you call this a conservative strategy because it is hedged," Ron the waiter added.

"Too true," Ardith responded, the essence of composure.

"Then what exactly are the risks of this covered call business?"

"Bring on the lychee chicken, my good man," Bloom encouraged first the waiter, then the cook, but both ignored his request.

"Gentlemen, there are two distinct risks associated with a covered call program. First, you stand to lose the upside of a stock when you've sold an option against your shares. One reason why most investors and brokers don't care for covered call writing is the desire to go for the home run, to squeeze every imagined dollar of profit out of a stock.

"Second, although you might make money once, twice or many times by selling options that expire against a stock, you can't continue the process should the market and your stock go down. You may have to wait. But if you would have waited anyway without originally selling options against your stock, why not wait if you are selling the options?"

"And now, my fine fellow, the lychee chicken."

Instead of heading back to the kitchen, the cook turned to Bloom and inquired, "Are you an investment detective? Do you know how a fine fellow like me can get started in a covered call program?"

"Quite simple. Ask your broker to give you a copy of an important little pamphlet called Understanding the Risks and Uses of Listed Options. Then have your broker show you the options agreement you will have to sign. Make sure you sign the agreement as a hedger. Let the crazies sign up for speculation."

"Very good," Fred the cook shouted, tearing his charred toque from his head. "For I am in fact not Fred Chung the master of stir fry, but I am Fred Chung the secret agent of the Options Clearing Corporation that oversees all options transactions and is in turn regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission. You have all passed the test!"

"And what was the test?" Piazza asked.

"To find out who in the Monterey Bay Area would have the chutzpah to explain a difficult but rewarding investment strategy like this over a series of articles in the Carmel Pine Cone/Pacific Grove Monarch."

"Does this mean I don't get the lychee chicken?"

"It means," Ardith said, "that you boys have to go out on a new adventure on behalf of all your readers and bring back some new investment concepts that will expand their horizons."

"No problem," the boys said in unison. But you see they were going to miss the lychee chicken for a long time to come.

THE KIRKIN' O' THE TARTAN JUNE 14

The annual Kirkin' o' the Tartan, a special church service sponsored by the Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula, will be held this year at 3 p.m. Sunday, June 14, in All Saints' Episcopal Church, Dolores and Ninth in Carmel.

The public is invited to attend the colorful and stirring ceremony, which will be conducted by the Rev. Robert Fosse, minister of the church, and a panel of clergy from various peninsula churches.

The bagpipes and drums of the 1st Salinas Valley Highlanders Pipe Band and kilted members of the society will participate. Mrs. Douglas (Mary Margaret) Graham of Carmel will be soprano soloist. Myron McTavish of Salinas will be organist.

The traditional conclusion of the service is presentation by members of the congregation of their family tartans — carried to the altar — while the roll of the clans is called by Hugh Morris of Pebble Beach, a society director. The blessing of the tartans will be by the Rev. William A. Boyd, interim minister of Felton Presbyterian Church.

Following the service there will be a reception in the All Saints' fellowship hall.

ROAMIN' THROUGH THE HEATHER

The La Playa Hotel's Poseidon Room will be transformed into Brigadoon for guests of the Forest Theater Guild's preview party from 7 to 10 p.m. Friday, June 5.

The benefit, held for Carmel's historic Forest Theater, promises to be a unique musical event, according to chairwoman Donna Marek. Musical numbers from the Theater's season opener, Lerner and Lowe's Brigadoon, will be featured. An exciting sword dance will also be included. Pipers will play periodically throughout the evening.

The La Playa's staff promises an array of hors d'oeuvres along with a complimentary glass of wine for each guest. No-host cocktails will also be available.

The Forest Theater is California's first open-air community theater and has produced plays since 1910. Musicals, tragedies and comedies are part of each season's productions. Early plays were originally directed by Carmel residents including Herbert Heron, Garnet Holme, Perry Newberry and John Hilliard.

Brigadoon will be directed by the guild's president Hamish Tyler. The musical opens June 11 and stars Linda Purdy as Fiona, Todd Leuders as Tommy, Lavonne Rae Andrews as Meg and Jeff will be played by the guild's Technical Director Keith Decker. FIRST CHILDREN'S BOOK FAIRE SET FOR JUNE 6

The Friends of the Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel will sponsor its first Children's Book Faire 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, June 6. Hundreds of books, exclusively for children and young adults, will be on sale on the front patio of the library.

For patrons' convenience while shopping for used books on the patio, a Disney film for children will be shown inside in the Children's Room from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. and again from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.

Proceeds of the sale will benefit the Harrison Memorial Library, which is located on Ocean Avenue at Lincoln in Carmel.

COUNTY HEARING AID BANKS PLANNED

Donations of used hearing aids are needed to initiate a countywide Hearing Aid Bank.

The Quota Club of the Monterey Peninsula has approved the funding and sponsorship of two such banks in Monterey County.

The Loaner Bank for which the used hearing aids are needed will be established for the use of adults who need an aid while theirs is being repaired or replaced. "The donation of an aid is tax deductible and the aid need not be functional. Quota will pay to have all units reconditioned," said the club's service chairwoman, Marcy Walls, audiologist.

The other bank will be established for the use of children for evaluation purposes only. The aids will be new and on consignment from manufacturers. Without a bank like this, children are fit more or less by an educated guess. By having a children's loaner bank available, it gives professionals the ability to evaluate their success and select more appropriate devices without the responsibility of purchase by the child's parents. "It gives us the flexibility of finding which aid works best," said Walls, who has personally instituted a similar program in San Diego.

The adult and children banks will be housed at Toro School, the county school for hearing impaired and deaf children under Director Mary Hayes. Aids for these two programs will be available through a hearing health care provider.

The Quota Club has initally earmarked $2,500 of its service funds to finance the program. Quota is a service organization of professional and executive women whose unified program is service to the hearing impaired called "Shatter Silence."

If you wish to donate a used hearing aid please call Marcy Walls by May 20 at 649-4000 or 372-3195.

OSBORNE BILL DECLARED EXORBITANT

Last Monday evening a special meeting of the city board of trustees was called for the purpose of considering matters of importance. The bills of Hugh R. Osborne, amounting to $1046.32, in connection with the Ocean Avenue paving proceedings were read and discussed. The legality of many of the items was disputed and others were declared exorbitant in view of the fact that many alleged errors had been found in his work and had been corrected by City Attorney Campbell.

A motion was adopted that the chairman of the board and the city attorney be appointed to confer with Osborne regarding a satisfactory settlement.

COUNCIL DECIDES TO TAX TOURIST ACCOMMODATIONS

Carmel decided last night to tax her tourists four percent on sleeping accommodations in hotels, motels and lodging houses, and perhaps to use some of the tax money for off-street parking.

The 3-2 action, taken at city council meeting last night, reverses a decision against the much-discussed room tax made by last fall's council.

A question of urgency was injected into the matter during the discussion of whether to make the ordinance effective on July 1. Such a date would call for an urgency ordinance, which by law require a four-fifths vote (at least 4 to 1) for passage, one more than the number of councilmen who voted to initiate action on the ordinance last night.

The council will meet tonight at 8:00 o'clock to vote on the ordinance, if by 5:00 o'clock today the city attorney can establish reasons for urgency in the matter.

SIGN VIOLATIONS ON SUNDAY

Driving through Carmel one Sunday, Councilman Mike Brown says he counted over 20 violations of the city's sign ordinance — all by realtors or people selling their own home.

Brown claims, in so many words, that while the cat's away (building inspectors don't work on Sunday) the mice will play. Although the item does not appear on the June 6th council agenda, Brown plans to bring up the problem of sign violations on Sunday.

In the case of temporary signs, such as those advertising the sale of property or announcing an open house, the city has set down strict regulations.

— Only one sign per property frontage.
— No sign shall exceed three square feet.
— No lettering may exceed three inches in height.

CARMEL VALLEY AIR MONITOR REMOVED

Carmel Valley has been without an air pollution measurement device since April 20 and efforts are underway to find a suitable location for the equipment.

The Monterey Bay Air Pollution Control District removed its monitoring device from the Mid-Valley Shopping Center because the site did not meet federal standards.

But the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, and CVPOA member Earl Moser, are engaged in an active search for another location before fall, when atmospheric conditions are most conducive to smog in the Valley.

Lawrence Odle, district air pollution control officer, informed Fifth District Monterey County Supervisor William Peters of the removal by letter.

"The station was located in a room used for storage and maintenance of garden equipment," Odle stated. "The room was not temperature controlled or kept clean. Various chemicals used in garden upkeep were also stored in the room."

CARMEL RIVER WATER NEWS

By Henrietta Stern

More than meets the eye

IN MY last column, I described how three "feasible" alternatives were selected for coequal analysis in the New San Clemente EIR/EIS. They included New San Clemente (NSC) dams with either a 16,000 acre-foot, 20,000 acre-foot or 29,000 acre-foot reservoir. Each project would be combined with new wells in Carmel Valley and coastal Seaside.

At its June 8 meeting, the district board will formally adopt a resolution calling for an advisory vote on the dam next November 3. In the meantime, district staff and consultants are carefully evaluating the three project sizes noted above to determine which is best. You will vote on that "preferred project," as they say in the trade.

There is more to any one of these projects than meets the eye. In addition to a dam and reservoir, you'll be voting on an integrated package of conditions, management schemes, operations and programs that would be part of any New San Clemente project, regardless of reservoir size. Each component is the result of much work and analysis. The purpose of today's column is to briefly review the full "project description" to provide a better sense of what your decision will entail.

THE BASICS

I think you know the basics: build a roller compacted concrete dam located approximately 3,600 feet downstream of the existing San Clemente Dam. Impound a reservoir to store either 16,000, 20,000 or 29,000 acre-feet. There's more...each project entails a spillway to safely pass water (and sometimes fish) over the dam; multiple level intake and outlet structures to efficiently release water for downstream use; and access roads for construction, maintenance or fishery work.

FISH ON THE MOVE

Our Carmel River steelhead sure get around: adults migrate upstream to spawn in winter, and juveniles migrate downstream to the ocean in spring. Fish passage facilities to help steelhead over the new dam (going up or downstream) are an important part of the project. After much analysis and negotiation, a "trap-and-truck" method was selected for both upstream and downstream migrants. In both cases (but with different structures), fish are attracted to a capture facility, separated by size, and quickly transported in hoppers for release on the other side.

COORDINATED WATER SUPPLY

As mentioned previously, each project entails two new wells in both Carmel Valley (Boronda area) and coastal Seaside. The Begonia treatment plant capacity would also be increased. This increased production capacity assures us that water can be reliably delivered to consumers.

"Conjunctive use" would be employed to tap our water resources. Conjunctive use entails the coordinated management of our surface and ground-water reservoirs to provide municipal and instream supply. Water sources will include the existing Los Padres Reservoir, the New San Clemente Reservoir, the Carmel Valley aquifer and the Seaside coastal aquifer. Withdrawal from these water sources is specified in the Carmel Valley Simulation Model (CVSIM).

District staff has worked closely with fishery consultants to develop a series of "fish rules" that reflect the biological needs of steelhead during various phases of its life cycle. Specific flow rates and water release patterns were developed to provide adequate conditions for upstream migration, downstream migration and juvenile rearing.

FUTURE WATER DEMAND

A normal year Cal-Am demand of 22,895 acre-feet is projected for the year 2020. This value accounts for projected growth from 1985 to 2020, the trend toward more water use per home ("intensification"), impacts of remodels, a district reserve for small systems that might fail, and a 15 percent reduction in year 2020 demand due to the district's conservation plan. The maximum dry year Cal-Am demand could total 24,612 acre-feet in the year 2020. This represents a 7.5 percent increase over the normal year value because people tend to use more water in dry years, unless rationed.

The water yield for new growth would be allocated in three phases: 48 percent release upon construction, another 26 percent in the year 2000 and the final 26 percent in the year 2010. In contrast to the existing situation, allotments of total supply to member jurisdictions within the district are not envisioned. Water connection permits will be issued as per market demand up to the total allocation limit within a particular time period.

On April 14, the board approved a rationing scheme that would be used with the project, if necessary. It should be emphasized that only a huge, very expensive dam can guarantee freedom from all droughts. If needed, various levels of rationing (10 percent, 25 percent, or 40 percent demand reduction) would be triggered by the difference between actual storage and varying drought reserve targets as well as time of year.

OTHER PROGRAMS

The district has an ongoing conservation program that would continue as part of the new project. Our goal is a 15 percent reduction in projected demand for the year 2020. Aspects of this program include public education, a conservation ordinance, free water-saving kits, seminars and contests. The use of reclaimed water to irrigate golf courses in the Del Monte Forest may also contribute to conservation efforts as the "freed up" potable water could be used for human consumption.

The district would continue the Carmel River Management Program past its 1993 termination date as part of the New San Clemente project to offset inundation of instream and riparian habitat by the new reservoir. Our ongoing irrigation program to maintain riparian vegetation adjacent to four Cal-Am production wells in the lower Carmel Valley would also continue as part of the project.

Well, that sums up a lot of information in a small amount of space. For more informaton on any aspect of the project, please do not hesitate to call me at 649-4866. I'm here to help!

Deferring Taxes Today

By Jayde Thompson

Under the new tax laws you can still defer the taxes on the profit you make on the sale of your home. To do so, you must buy and occupy another home as your primary residence within two years either before or after the sale. The cost of this replacement home must be at least as much as the sales price of the original.

Your profit is how much you sell your home for over and above its adjusted basis. Simply put, the adjusted basis of your original home is what you paid for it adding the cost of any improvements and subtracting such things as depreciation, where appropriate.

If you bought your home for $100,000, for example, and put in a $25,000 swimming pool — all else being equal — the adjusted basis for your home would be $125,000. If you sell it for $200,000, you would be liable for taxes on the $75,000 profit. If you buy a replacement home costing at least $200,000 within two years, you can defer the taxes on the profit.

Remember, too, that if either you or your spouse is 55 or older, this profit may be offset by the once-in-a-lifetime $125,000 deduction. And, above all, talk with your professional tax advisor and your Realtor before entering into a transaction. Please call me, Jayde Thompson, your Carmel specialist at Real Estate By The Sea at 624-1444 or stop by my office at San Carlos and Seventh.

Debate rages on reasons for fire's unusual fury

By NANCY HILLS

IN THE aftermath of the devastation created by the Pebble Beach fire, a debate on the reasons there was so much destruction of property for what started as a small forest fire rages almost as hot as the fire itself.

While the King City headquarters of the California Department of Forestry for San Benito and Monterey counties prepare a blow-by-blow chronology of their dispatch tapes, bits and pieces of the picture are emerging:

• The area is very dry this year, with low rainfall and three previous years of reduced moisture. One tired fireman said the Del Monte area is known as an "asbestos forest" because foggy conditions usually reduces the fire danger. But not this year, he said.

Almost everyone agrees this could be a bad year for fires everywhere in the state.

"This'll be the year," one fireman predicted.

• Wind is a very important factor in containing fires. According to Roy Perkins, CDF chief ranger for the area, the weather report for May 31 did not indicate any unusual weather conditions nor predicated the high winds that came up during the day. If it had, they would have asked for more support immediately.

As it was, without those conditions, they dispatched five personnel — the entire Pebble Beach CDF shift, which were on the scene within six minutes of the report of smoke. The fire was reported at 3:35 p.m. The wind did not come up until about an hour later.

One firefighter on the scene early, when it was still a small canyon fire, said that it was all going fine. Then the wind came up.

"There was a loud 'whoosh', and that was it — it was going," he said.

By at least 6 p.m., the houses on the ridge overlooking the canyon had been engulfed.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman said conversations with other agencies revealed that in windy conditions, like the Santa Ana winds in Southern California, they have lost 400 to 500 hundred homes in a blaze like the one in Malibu a few years ago.

Nothing could make up for the loss of homes, she added, but we should all be thankful there were no serious injuries or accidents in the populated area.

• Air support could have been a factor. Normally, Perkins said, in a forest fire, even a small spot, they dispatch a truck with air support. However, the air tanker from Hollister that services this area was not available when called at 4:10 p.m., before the wind even started. It was working a fire in south Los Padres National Forest.

Another tanker was called from Chico, but it could not get there until 5:30 p.m.

It was unusual to even have a tanker available at this time of the year, Perkins said.

"We usually don't have a contract until July, but this year we changed that to June," Perkins said.

• The brush that has built up over the years in Del Monte Forest hindered the firefighters and fed the fire.

One firefighter said that they couldn't even get their equipment through the heavy brush and it was hard to work in.

"We were pushing it back with our chests as we walked through," he said.

Clearing brush in a populated area, Perkins said, is a complicated question. Controlled burns are difficult to do and clearing by hand is next to impossible.

The underbrush feeds the fires in the tops of the trees.

• Evacuation is the responsibility of the Monterey County Sheriff's Department, not the fire department. Though they advise the sheriffs, in heavy fire conditions, the fireman don't have the time.

"When everything starts going bananas like that, we don't have time to tell everyone to move. We're working on containment, saving structures, etc.," said one fire captain. People have to use some common sense, he said.

• The CFD usually puts three men on a truck, a number some have said is too few.

Perkins explained that "though he didn't blame it on funding, with the budget they have they usually don't have the personnel to put more than three on a truck."

CDF had three on the Pebble Beach truck that responded to the original call and two additional personnel, a normal contingent for a wildfire or smoke check.

• The Monterey Board of Supervisors has asked for a complete briefing of the entire situation from all the departments.

• The supervisors have asked the county planning department to move all new plans for rebuilding through as quickly as possible, and the Coastal Commission has agreed to that also, Strasser Kauffman said.

A house can be rebuilt with an increase of 10 percent of the original footprint, she added.

The supervisors have also started the process for getting low-interest disaster loans for victims of the fire. Strasser Kauffman suggested that they call her office for information at 659-2733.

EQUAL HOUSING LENDER

City council wrap-up: Housing, park discussed

By DAVID LELAND

IN OTHER action at its June 2 meeting the Carmel City Council also took action on the following items:

• Amended a specific plan for low-income senior citizen housing at Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue which allows 24 units to be built instead of the 15 units originally in the plan.

At the same time it increased density the council also adopted a negative declaration for the project, which also includes a 37-space underground parking garage, with a cost to the city of $538,000.

The only concerns expressed by some councilmembers and residents was that the density allowed by the amendment exceeds the city's general plan.

The plan states there can only be 24 units per acre. It works out with the new plan that the density would be 53 units per acre, according to Councilman Jim Wright.

"This is the first step in developing a site," said Planning Director Dianne White. She added the next step would be a review by the Coastal Commission and then a local planning review.

• Overturned a request to reconsider last month's action involving a project between Toots Lagoon restaurant and Piccadilly Park by Councilman Jim Wright.

Wright said he questioned whether the public had had ample opportunity to express its feelings on the matter at last month's meeting.

He also wondered if a future owner would be bound by the lease agreement. He was told by City Atty. Don Freeman that it would.

There was some opposition to the construction which will, among other things, provide a door from the restaurant into the park.

A petition was presented to the council by Mary Lou Schneeberger, signed by local residents protesting the action.

"Never has so much been given for so little," said Schneeberger, referring to the city having access to public restrooms within the Toots Lagoon in exchange for some remodeling in the restaurant.

"Toots is now in cohoots with the city," she said. She added that if the city goes through with the agreement with Toots Lagoon, "There will be nothing left but to rename it 'Heartbreak Park.' "

The council voted 4-1, exactly as it had the month before, with Wright dissenting again.

• Approved a request from the Carmel Bach Festival to display 20 banners along Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Streeet celebrating the festival's 50th anniversary.

The 4- by 6-foot banners have Bach's monogram silkscreened in red on a white background.

The council also approved a parade involving children led by musicians from the Bach Festival at 12:30 p.m. July 30, which will begin at Devendorf Park and end at Sunset Center.

• Gave the planning department a policy regarding requests for city involvement on issues outside Carmel's sphere of influence.

Planning Director Dianne White told councilmembers that her staff is in a "dilemma" when it comes to requests from people outside the one-mile incorporated area.

The direction provides that the county continue to send referrals of all projects except single-family homes to the planning department which may have significant impact of the planning commission.

Also, requests that the county continue sending referrals of major planning projects, such as the local coastal plan or general plan amendments.

It was decided that there needed to be more specific guidelines drawn up in the future regarding this problem.

The new policy does not involve an additional workload on city staff because the policy provided is essentially what they are already doing.

• Received $350,000 from the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees toward the renovation of the new annex at the vacant Crocker Bank building on Sixth Avenue and Mission Street.

• Forwarded a report to the Department of Parks and Recreation regarding the general plan amendment for the Carmel River State Beach Plan.

The report states that the city generally favors a proposed 75- to 100-car parking lot to be installed at Monastery Beach, south of Carmel on Highway 1.

The parks commission will meet at 9 a.m. Thursday, June 11 in Carpenter Hall to further discuss the plan. (See related story this issue.)

Several factors added fuel to destructive fire

"I remember that man always working in his garden," she said sadly.

Perkins took her to another modern-style home which remained standing. Behind the home, the fire left the ground black — up to the greenbelt of ice plant surrounding the back deck.

Such greenbelts could save a home from ground fire, Perkins said.

Greenbelts around homes and housing developments help keep a fire from spreading, Perkins said.

•

EARLIER IN the day, Perkins took the supervisor up in a helicopter to survey the scene.

Commenting on the fact that people think of Pebble Beach as a developed area, immune from the natural disasters that plague other rural communities.

"There's one thing that is very clear from the air — this is definitely a forest," Strasser Kauffman said, and as such is subject to forest fires.

The fire area appeared as a bald spot in the trees, with browned tops all that was left of the foliage. Smoke from areas still burning rose in a number of locations.

Over the housing development, Strasser Kauffman said it looked like photographs from World War II of bombed-out cities. The outline of foundations was all that could be seen, with here and there a home still standing.

"It was much worse, much worse than I anticipated," she said later.

The presence of so many structures in the forest, Perkins added, creates additional problems for what would have been fought as any other forest fire.

"We spend all our time protecting the structures rather than containing the flame," he said.

Also, Perkins explained that undergrowth builds over the years because it is difficult to conduct control burns in a populated area and clearing that much shrubbery away by hand is next to impossible.

City's 1987-88 budget up by 17.5 percent

By DAVID LELAND

AMENDMENTS TO the 1987-88 budget were heard Wednesday by the Carmel City Council in a special meeting, with figures reflecting an increase of 17.5 percent or $1,033,423 over last year's figures due to some major projects.

The large amount of city activity during the second year of a budget is unusual, according to Doug Schmitz, city administrator.

"The second year of a biennial period should be one of status quo, carrying on the basic themes projected previously to cover the two years," Schmitz said in his report to the council. "(But) part two of the Biennial Budget 1986-88 is anything but status quo."

This year's total budget is $6,937,452.

It was unclear at press time whether the council would adopt the entire proposed budget, part of it or use the meeting as a study session to gain information.

Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo complained that she had not had time to adequately review the 185-page document because of the council meeting the night before and therefore was not familiar with the information.

At the heart of the budget increase are three major municipal projects which came into effect after the budget was adopted June 30, according to Schmitz.

These were:

• The Carmel Beach Restoration Project Phase II, with a cost to the city of $450,000 or 6.5 percent of the budget increase.

• An underground parking garage at the senior citizen housing project, located at Fifth Avenue and Dolores Street. This will cost the city $538,000 or 7.8 percent of the total budget increase.

• The lease purchase agreement with the Harrison Memorial Library for the annex at a cost of $325,000 or 4.7 percent of the budget increase.

Originally when the council passed the 1987-88 budget last June, a budget of $6,612,452 was anticipated for the coming fiscal year. Since the purchase of the annex that total has been increased $350,000 to the current total, Schmitz said.

The above three items make up nearly 20 percent of the budget increase expenditures.

Labor contracts at $270,000 and the first installment on a fire pumper for the fire department at $87,000 round out the reasons for the increase.

The principal method of financing the increase will come from the hotel tax, Schmitz said. During the coming year, $2,678,568 or 38 percent of revenue will come from that tax.

Sales tax comes in a distant second with anticipated revenues of $1,680,917 or 24.2 percent.

Other cash flow will come from property taxes, traffic citations, business licenses, a coastal conservancy grant and parking in-lieu fee transfer.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

The Hospice in the Carmel tradition

Invocation to the Carmel Rotary Club
June 3, 1981

Two hundred and eleven years ago today, on June 3, 1770, the venerable Franciscan from Petra de Mallorca, Padre Junipero Serra, and the vibrant and good-natured Catalan Don Gaspar de Portola took possession of California and made Monterey the capital of both Baja and Alta California.

They also founded the Mission of San Carlos de Borromeo which was moved to Carmel the next year and the church where Padre Serra now lies buried.

Oh Lord, bless California as you blessed the cross of Serra and the sword of Portola this day so long ago.

Padre Serra bent down and touched with his hands and his heart the despised and primitive Carmel Indians whom the Spaniards said only a saint could love. Padre Serra did give them love; they knew it and they felt it and they came to sit for hours and bask in the rays of that love.

Once again men and women in the Carmel Valley at the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, 8900 Carmel Valley Road, are reaching out and grasping hands and touching hearts of those facing inevitable death alone. Often, like Padre Serra's Indians, they are frightened, insecure and confused. Sometimes they strike out in rebellion against God and man, consumed with jealousy against others who are not ill. They even turn against those trying to help them.

Padre Serra said that in the face of every disturbed Carmel Indian he saw the face of Christ. Padre Serra's Indians felt his love in their very bones and the guests of the Hospice feel that same kind of love.

Oh Lord, continue to inspire the founder, members and supporters of this noble effort in the true tradition of Carmel.

Finally, Feliz cumple anos, paisanos...saludes, peso y besos, embracos, un vase de vino y amor. A happy 211th birthday, paisanos...health, happiness, pesos, a jug of vino and love (the love of God, that is), and the time to enjoy them. Come and eat and drink...it's later than you think. Amen.

Poet's innovative play produced at last — and with video, music

By ANNE PAPINEAU

A LIVING room table akin to an ant farm provided the inspiration for Jeanne D'Orge's Cockroach Tale 3-by-13, premiering Friday at Cherry Hall in Carmel.

For years Carmel poet and painter Jeanne D'Orge kept a table that was home to a thriving termite community. Through the glass top of the termitary she was able to observe the highly organized society of these insects. Each termite played out a role proscribed from birth, be it worker, queen or warrior.

The termites' lifecycle prompted D'Orge to compose a play about individualism. She began Cockroach Tale during the 1930s, a time of social and political upheaval, and continued refining her play over the next three decades.

D'Orge died in 1964, and the home in which she and her husband Carl Cherry both worked now houses a gallery, theater and archives. Cockroach Tale 3-by-13 will at last come to life, and in the setting where it was conceived and written.

"This has definitely consumed my life for the last six months," explained Marlie Avant, who pored over hundreds of pages of D'Orge's writings to produce the working script.

EMPLOYING PATIENCE and a word processor, Marlie Avant devoted months to organizing Jeanne D'Orge's original manuscript of Cockroach Tale 3-by-13. The play will premiere and be followed by a gala opening reception Friday, June 5 at Cherry Hall in Carmel. (Holly McFarland photograph).

IVAN FLANSBURG (left) portrays a guardian termite talking to student worker or "glyph" John Freeman about the "purpose of the body communal." The play's author, the late Jeanne D'Orge, found inspiration for Cockroach Tale 3-by-13 in a termitary she kept in her living room. (Holly McFarland photograph).

Conrad Selvig, a theater arts instructor at Monterey Peninsula College, directs the innovative play.

"I've always taken on fairly experimental works, but this is the most challenging," Selvig said. "The script was a finished project in itself. The stage directions were almost as poetic as the script."

Using D'Orge's writings as their guide, Selvig and Avant have devised a multi-media theater piece. Cockroach Tale 3-by-13 employs video, original music, voice-over narration, screen projections, dance and Tai Chi movement.

"Jeanne D'Orge wrote a piece about her frustration with the theatrical medium. She said she wanted a new theater form, and we have stretched into a new realm," Avant explained.

Not only symbolically, but the Cockroach Tale crew has also physically enlarged the small theater at Cherry Hall. To accommodate the mythical termite landscape envisioned by D'Orge, Selvig punched an 11-by-8-foot hole to expand Cherry Hall's stage some 12 feet. New lighting has also been installed for this play.

The audience for Cockroach Tale 3-by-13 will be treated to original music composed by Thomas Burke, which he performed on piano, guitar, harp and saxophone. Vernon and Candy Boes devised synthesized sound effects and vocal selections that punctuate the play. Pre-show music was written by Jason Davies.

Walter White choreographed the dance elements of the story, including a termite mating ritual. Marlie Avant created the costumes meant to delineate the different castes within the termite hierarchy, and interpreted D'Orge's set designs.

Avant swathed the queen, played by K.C. Grinstead, in several yards of bubble wrap. The actors wear mesh masks to reinforce their adherance to set roles. The costumes are repleat with satins and gold lame, producing an insect world which the designer describes as "very glitzy."

THE PLAY'S author, Jeanne D'Orge Cherry, was born Emma Yates in Lancashire, England in 1877. She was a published poet and playwright by age 20, and came to the United States in 1906, the wife of Dean Burton, who later became dean of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

D'Orge came to Carmel during the 1920s and became involved in literary and theater circles, serving on the Forest Theater's board of directors, producing plays and designing costumes. During this period she met Carl Cherry, an MIT graduate and inventor. Among his inventions was the "blind rivet," a self-sealing rivet that would bring him a fortune in the 1940s. This became known as the "Cherry Rivet" and would literally revolutionize the course of aerial warfare.

Cockroach Tale director Conrad Selvig remembers seeing Jeanne D'Orge at the Tantamount Theater in Carmel Valley when he was a child. At the suggestion of the playwright's friend, Jane Wilgress, he went to work bringing D'Orge's vision before an audience.

"The production has been a great experiment in combining things. The direction, the costumes and the music would dictate the moods we created. It just was not spelled out," he explained.

Blanche Pedley, a member of the board of the non-profit Cherry Foundation, donated a personal grant to launch Cockroach Tale 3-by-13.

D'Orge's play is recorded on hundreds of typewritten pages, written and stored at the foundation. The playwright, who was also a prolific painter, often indicated suggestions for set design and mood using small drawings in the margins of her script. Some of these pages will be framed and hanging in Cherry Hall during the run of the play.

Avant read and attempted to restore order to the lengthy script, and transferred it to a word processor.

"She writes in rhythms and patterns. She wants to feel the words rather than just mentally process the words. She wanted people to feel the play. She uses free license in spelling and sometimes she makes up words," Avant noted of the project.

ARTS & LEISURE

Despite its encyclopedic script, the multimedia production that sprung from it is neither lengthy nor serious. According to the director, Cockroach Tale 3-by-13 runs only about one hour and 20 minutes and incorporates quite a bit of humor.

"This whole thing is about spirit and individualism versus non-spirit and almost automatism — about being put into a large system that does not allow for individualism," Avant noted. "D'Orge was an individual. Her fear was that society was moving in a direction in which we'd become automatons. She could be serious and she could be very funny at the same time. She called this a light opera."

Cockroach Tale 3-by-13 will premiere with a gala opening at 8 p.m. Friday, June 5.

New Age musicians perform for benefit of public radio

AN AURAL GALAXY will sparkle over the Monterey Peninsula Saturday, June 6 when Ancient Future appears in concert in Carmel. The ensemble will be performing at 8 p.m. at Sunset Theater in a benefit for local non-commercial radio station KAZU-FM.

Advance tickets — at $10 each — are on sale now at Bookworks in Pacific Grove; Recycled Records and Center Stage Ticketing in Monterey; Do-Re-Mi Records in Carmel and Cymbeline Records in Santa Cruz.

Although the variety of its music makes it difficult to label, Ancient Future plays what it calls "World Fusion" music, a collage of styles from cultures circling the planet. Others simply call it "New Age" music, drawing on a format of soft, mellow jazz whose popularity has rocketed over the past few years.

Now a quartet, Ancient Future embraces a wealth of both musical scholarship and playing time with numerous other artists. The group has headlined at Carnegie Hall in New York and the Great American Music Hall in San Francisco, among many others, performing with musicians as diverse as John Fahey (folk guitar), Tania Maria (jazz vocal), and Sukay (Latin American Indian).

A glittering review in a San Francisco paper called the foursome's music "mesmerizing." Other reviews have pointed out the pulsating rhythms and melodic blends that are both energizing and serene.

Currently recording for MCA's New Age label, Narada, Ancient Future won two awards for a previous album in 1984, Natural Rhythms. The group has recorded three albums overall; its current release is called Quiet Fire.

Among some of the more unusual tunes they've recorded is a series of pieces with a chorus of Balinese rice paddy frogs — such as "Frogorian Chance" — on the Natural Rhythms album. The current record, as the name implies, is a quiet, more "ambient" recording, peaceful and delicate.

Each of the four musicians plays a variety of instruments. Percussionist Ian Dogole has a bachelor's in ethnomusicology plus a master's in classics. Dogole, who has mastered such instruments as the African talking drum, Burmese temple drum, and other exotic percussion kits, has also released two albums under his own name and performed with a variety of other musicians.

Group spokesman Mathew Montfort is a guitarist who also plays sitar, gamelan, and other stringed instruments. Montfort holds a bachelor's in world music plus a master's in arts and media technology. He is the author of what is generally known as the "world beat bible," Ancient Traditions — Future Possibilities.

Doug McKeehan, a pianist who also plays Indian stringed instruments, has worked on the musical stage and recorded with other artists.

Rounding out the foursome is Bruce Bowers, McKeehan's partner in another group. Bowers plays such instruments as the violin, flute, panpipes, and electronic synthesizers. He has performed with numerous other artists as well — in fact, Bowers and McKeehan are the nucleus of a performing and recording group know as Air Craft.

Ancient Future has graced three previous benefits for KAZU, all of them sellouts. The station is known for its innovative New Age format, on the air five mornings a week from 6 to 9:30 as well as Saturday mornings from 8 to 11. The New Age block has also been KAZU's most successful fund-raiser during on-air marathons for listener contributions.

New Age music, which draws from folk, jazz, rock, and classical sounds, has been a staple on KAZU since the station's inception nearly 10 years ago. When KAZU began featuring the music early in the morning late in 1981, New Age was still an obscure blend enjoyed strictly by aficionados. But since the explosion in popularity of the style, led by the Windham Hill label, the format is being copied by commercial radio stations on the West Coast.

But the sound of Ancient Future, a mosaic of many cultures and musics, has to be heard to be believed. Tickets for the June 6 concert, set to start at 8 p.m. at Carmel's Sunset Center, are $10 in advance and $12 at the door, if available.

NEW AGE recording artists Ancient Future will perform a concert for the benefit of public-supported radio station KAZU. The concert, to take place at Sunset Theater in Carmel, will begin at 8 p.m. on Saturday, June 6.

THEATER REVIEW

By Joanne Tenenbaum

'The Normal Heart' staged at GroveMont

UNLESS YOU'VE been spending all your time on some other planet, AIDS has become an issue in your life. This mysterious virus, which first gained national attention as a terminal affliction of homosexual men, has emerged as a global epidemic, striking heterosexual and homosexual alike, and even children yet unborn. Which of us can afford to ignore it?

Larry Kramer's The Normal Heart, now onstage at New Monterey's GroveMont Theater, focuses on New York City's gay community from 1981 to 1983, a time when AIDS cases were multiplying mysteriously and alarmingly, and when the virus itself was yet to be identified.

A terrifying time for Ned Weeks (Sid Cato), Bruce Niles (Jack Whittaker), Mickey Marcus (Michael Jacobs) and Felix Turner (Kemper York), the principals of this drama.

Bruce is a successful banker and closet homosexual puzzled by the lingering deaths of three of his lovers in a row. Mickey has spent the preceding 15 years championing gay men's rights to promiscuity. And Ned is the successful, fashionably effete writer who is reluctantly roped into sounding the alarm throughout the gay community of a disease no one can identify or treat.

The Normal Heart is sometimes too frankly didactic, placing alarming statistics and set speeches in the mouths of its characters. And sometimes it is self-serving, particularly to the extent that it uses the AIDS epidemic as a vehicle for educating the audience about the feelings and problems of gay people.

In the play, these problems and feelings emerge as not so very different from everyone else's, except perhaps as they have been exacerbated by society's constraints. Is this a cop-out? I don't know. Certainly oppression breeds neurosis. But the playwright's pro-homosexual sympathies are clear, and under Rosamond Goodrich's direction, the production has a highly emotional tone that enhances them still further.

Sid Cato's performance as Ned Weeks dominates the play. The writer is galvanized into action by a pioneering doctor (Sandy Williams), through whose helpless hands many of his dying friends have passed. The doctor's charge is simplicity itself: Tell them to stop having sex; tell them it's killing them and we don't know why.

Once enlisted, Weeks is tireless in his attempts to get this message across, but his mission is complicated by the indifference of the media and the medical profession and the opposition of his own peers.

It is not a pretty story and it has its wretched excesses, but given the dire nature of the material, it is rather a compelling one. Cato's performance sometimes careens into overemotionalism, but by and large he handles the rich part very well and holds the production together in the process.

Kemper York is persuasive as Weeks' dying lover, Michael Jacobs handles his own crisis scene very well, and Jay Hudson contributes engaging humor as a southern "belle."

Jack Whittaker's Bruce Niles is no match for Cato's Weeks, and this is too bad, for their adversary relationship is central to the play.

FELIX (Kemper York, left) and Ned (Sid Cato), share a happy moment in The Normal Heart, continuing at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center in New Monterey.

The events Weeks tries to publicize in 1981 sound now, in 1987, like an unheeded prophecy blowing across a graveyard. The issue that galvanized Weeks into a confident man of vision and impassioned action can no longer be called a gay issue. But the problems he confronts leave us with a guide to effective action in the future. Clearly, denial of the disease spells death. Clearly, it is nihilistic to allow provincial moral judgments to block the use of full resources to combat AIDS.

All awareness-building aside, The Normal Heart is, at bottom, a vehicle for building understanding and tolerance among gays and heterosexuals. One caveat: If you dislike sexually explicit language or onstage demonstrations of affection between men, this is not your play.

MUSIC CORNER

By Jo Ann La Torra

They happen in twos

EVERYTHING seems to happen by pairs here on the peninsula. We have two orchestras, two chamber music series, two choral groups. Now we have two organ series. It makes one wonder about the ratio of twin births to single ones.

The United Methodist Church of Pacific Grove (the "Butterfly" Church) has been sponsoring an organ series for the past two years. In addition to noted local artists, they have featured such renowned musicians as Reiko Oda-Lane, James Welch and Thomas Hazelton.

Now the Carmel Mission is offering a series. Well ... too much is probably better than not enough.

The series got off to a good beginning on Sunday the 31st, with John Balka, organist at Saint Mary's Cathedral in San Francisco.

For the first half of his program, Balka chose works that would demonstrate the different ranks of pipes. He opened with a delightful Sonata by the late 18th century Spanish composer, Jose Lidon, featuring the regal trumpets, one of the outstanding ranks on the organ. That was followed by the Toccata, Adagio and Fugue (BWV 564) of J.S. Bach. Neither Balka nor the organ was at their best in Bach.

A charming set of variations by the French Rococo composer Claude-Benigne Balbastre, was one of the highlights of the program. Balka's registrations were chosen to show off the variety of tone colors available. Although occasionally they seemed selected for their own sake, rather than to underscore the music, the total effect was exhilarating.

Four Hymntune Sketches by the California composer, Dale Wood, followed. These are clever arrangements in a conservative harmonic idiom which does lose its capacity to delight after a while. Two of them would have been sufficient. That would have left some of us wanting more instead of relieved to have them over.

The last portion of the program was devoted to a series of pieces by early 20th century French composers that made a symphony: a fast movement by Vierne, an Andante Sostenuto by Widor, a Scherzo of Gigout, and the famous Toccata from Symphony V of Widor. The first movement was based on the carillon of Westminster, using that theme as a cantus firmus. The Widor Andante was properly Romantic; the Gigout Scherzo, a charming piece, got a bit out of control, but retained considerable excitement. The finale is, to put it mildly, so overdone on organ concerts that to bring anything fresh to it is well nigh impossible. Nevertheless, Balka delivered this flashy piece in a colorful and exciting performance, literally all-stops-out.

Both the organ and Balka were at their best in the French repertoire. The timbers of this organ are not very well-suited to North German Baroque music, but they do lend themselves well to the late Romantic French repertoire. Balka's Bach was somewhat labored, but the French music had a good natural flow and built to stunning climaxes.

The organs at the Mission and the Butterfly church are entirely different, although there does not appear to be any special effort to fit the artists to the organ. One should never complain of riches, but the sizes of the audiences suggest that organ concerts are not yet the first choice of local concert-goers.

THEATER REVIEW

By Joe Guzaitis

'Dracula: The Musical?' plays Wharf Theater

NOT SINCE Mel Brooks' Springtime for Hitler have we seen a musical with the cheek of Dracula: The Musical? This pastiche of themes and gags could be considered an "olio of the undead." It borrows some bits from the Frankenstein story to bolster its own production, it also patches in some songs that don't belong. It requires that you be predisposed to this kind of craziness when you arrive because you will enjoy the show in direct proportion to how funny you feel. So get happy before you attend this bizarre burlesque and you'll have a grand old time.

Directed by Mikel Pippi from a script by Rick Abbot, this production is brought to you by the Frohman Academy and the American Musical Theater Festival. You may remember Little Mary Sunshine, that curious but amusing tale of the Northwest that was played out on the old Cal Rep stage, or Heaven Sent with Joanne Worley et al. on the MPC stage. These were both Frohman productions.

The Frohman Academy is currently taking a survey to determine just what kind of musical comedy or dramatic works we want them to present here on the peninsula. If you want your opinion considered, be sure that you get a copy of the survey form at the Wharf Theater or write to The Frohman Academy, P.O. Box I, Carmel CA 93921. Ask for the Audience Survey form.

The plot of the piece is minimal. Count Dracula has taken a castle next to the Seward's Sanitarium in the Carpathians and, as new neighbor, is being asked for dinner. He arrives and the women all swoon. (He leaves abruptly because there was garlic in the pot roast.) Mina follows him and falls further under his spell. When it is obvious to all that Miss Mina has become the Count's victim, the others plot to destroy him by keeping him out past his bedtime to have him perish with the dawn. There are twists and surprises and much silliness, and all ends happily.

Eleanor Wylde steals the show with her wacky portrayal of Nelly Norton, the Seward's maid. She has a German accent (another Frankenstein shtick), Teutonic hairdo, and joined eyebrows. She hams up her scenes with such gusto that we can't help but laugh.

Jay Ostby is very good as Count Dracula. He embodies a sinister innocence that works very well. He also plays the cameo role of the returned Jonathan Harker at the end of the piece. Jay was one of the Royal Canadian Mounties in Little Mary Sunshine. He brought a "contagious enthusiasm" to that role that made him stand out from the troupe.

"Contagious enthusiasm" is also the clinical diagnosis that has been rendered for Renfield and is the reason that he is in Dr. Seward's care. The wickedly lucid Renfield plays the crazy and eats bugs and also befriends Count Dracula and plots intrigues. Played by Larry Ayo, Renfield is more Monty Python than morbid pathology. He scampers about the stage delivering caustic comments at telling moments and making outrageous puns that serve as entrees to a series of unlikely songs consisting of a tribute to several states of the union. For instance, the line "...what master chooses..." suggests "Massachusetts!" and we are then subjected to a musical recitation of the names of cities and towns in that fair state. Why we are singing about Massachusetts (and New Jersey, California, Minnesota, and Maine) in a musical about Dracula puzzles me. It might have been worse if Larry Ayo could project, but his singing voice could barely be heard over the music so the problem was minimized.

Larry is also responsible for the set design. He works well with the constraints of the Wharf Theater's limited space to create a suitably cluttered Victorian decor complete with trick flowers that wilt when Dracula passes by and a mirror that does not show a vampire's image. Lighting design is by George Gzienski, who creates the crucial (and convincing) lightning bolts for those key scenes of confrontation on the balcony.

Leila Knight plays Miss Mina (pronounced minna), who becomes enamored of the Count and thereby becomes a second degree vampiress (having sustained two bites) in the process. At the height of her career as a Draculaphile, she sports a wig with white steaks in it reminiscent of Elsa Lanchester in Bride of Frankenstein.

Miss Bubu Padoop is a new addition to the Dracula canon. She is billed as a British music hall singer and is played by Gina Welch-Hagen. She is inserted into the play as a romantic lead for Dr. Van Helsing, the vampire hunter. She plays an upwardly mobile slattern well, using her tarnished charms to vamp the vampire hunter.

Van Helsing is played by Rich Hughett with a combiation of zealotry (against vampires) and reluctance (to Ms. Padoop). He rages and sputters and then cringes and whimpers, all in good fun.

Michael McKee and Dorothy Scardina play the Sewards, Dr. and Mrs., who run the asylum that contains Renfield, and presumably, other patients. McKee plays the quirky old psychologist convincingly and Scardina gives us a good stage presence as the "grande dame" of the piece.

The music is provided by David Latham, Barney Hulse, and Kathy Nathan on piano, synthesizer, and drums. Tucked into a doorway this little group tries its best to be up to the production's demand but they need a bit more oomph. A few more players (I'm not sure where one would put them.) would help a lot. More amplifications might do the job.

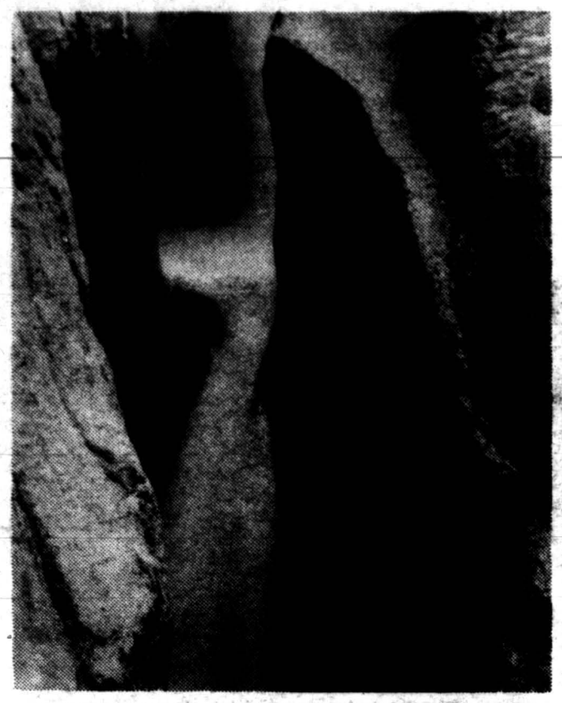
Shoreline, mountains dominate new McArthur photography show

"ALONG THE COAST, Out the Valley," an exhibition of black and white photographs by Peter McArthur, will open in the Cherry Foundation's gallery on June 6 and continue through June 27.



WATERFALL, Sierra Nevada, 1968 is among the photographs by Peter McArthur that will be exhibited this month at the Cherry Foundation Gallery in Carmel. A reception for the artist is planned 2 to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, June 6. For details, call 624-7491.

The series of 40 photographs, which were selected from 20 years of McArthur's work, details scenes from the Sierra Nevada mountains, the Big Sur Coast and Carmel Valley.

McArthur's subjects include formally composed landscapes, non-representational works and precise still-lifes. The exhibition features representative examples from all these genres with special emphasis on capturing powerful forms and light in nature.

Strongly influenced by Japanese Haiku poetry, the writing of Gary Snyder and Robinson Jeffers, McArthur says that in photography he is constantly "looking for the moment that conveys something other than a simple record of a scene — something enlightening."

McArthur began photographing during his first year at Arizona State using a 35mm camera and working in black and white. His early influences — Ansel Adams, Edward Weston and Imogen Cunningham — can be seen in the current exhibit in the use of formal design elements.

After transferring to Monterey Peninsula College in 1965, McArthur began to study photography seriously when he was introduced to Brett Weston, Adams and Cunningham. He later asked the famous photographers to critique his work.

"The comments were memorable," McArthur says. "Ansel Adams thought I should crop my favorite full frame sunset, Brett Weston thought many of the images 'too easy,' and Imogen Cunningham wanted to know my deeper reasons for photographing."

The recipient of a number of photography awards for work using an 8-by-10 inch view camera, McArthur has had six solo exhibitions on the west coast. His work has been represented in Time-Life books "The Great Themes" photography series in 1970 and in the California Insurance Group's competition, where he won a second place. Peter McArthur lives in Carmel Valley.

A reception for the photographer will be held in the foundation's gallery from 2 to 4:30 p.m., Saturday, June 6.

The Cherry Foundation is located at Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel. For more information, call 624-7491.

Friends awards Peter Reiss Ferguson Grant

THE FRIENDS of Photography's 1987 Ferguson Grant, a $2,000 award, was presented to Peter Reiss of Los Angeles.

PETER REISS, recipient of the Friends of Photography 1987 Ferguson Grant, made this silver print portrait of Richard Flores. The photographer is also a past recipient of grants from the National Foundation for the Arts.

Reiss' winning portfolio is composed of portraits of his developmentally disabled photography students at the Art Center of the Exceptional Children's Foundation, where he has been an artist-in-residence since 1982. His poignant black and white images, created with a plastic camera, are collaborations with his students and serve to present them with a more positive image. At the same time, these photographs challenge society's stereotypes of the disabled.

The Ferguson Grant has been awarded annually since 1972. It recognizes and supports early career photographers who have demonstrated excellence in and commitment to creative photography.

Reiss, who received his MFA in photography in 1979, has photographed disabled children and adults for a number of years and has explored the use of plastic toy cameras, pinhole cameras and both black and white color film in creating portraits.

Besides teaching at the Exceptional Children's Foundation, he is an instructor at Otis-Parsons School of Design in Los Angeles and has been exhibiting his work actively since 1977. Reiss has received two National Endowment for the Arts Fellowships for his compelling portraits.

A different Ferguson Grant juror is selected for each annual competition; and, over the years, the photographs selected represdent a broad range of aesthetic ideas. This year's juror, Jo Ann Callis, is the first judge to have been a previous Ferguson Award recipient. Callis, who has taught at California Institute of the Arts in Valencia since 1979, was awarded the 1978 Fergusen Grant. Her images, which have consistently elicited strong emotional responses through her arrangement of objects and gestures, have been widely respected, published and exhibited.

In response to Reiss' work, Callis wrote, "Peter's photographs are haunting and memorable. He makes work that is strongly connected to his inner life, which is what gives the pictures their power. He has been persistent in his compassionate exploration of the look and affect of people that most of us wish to overlook."

Recreation department announces programs

An array of summertime recreational activities, of interest to the entire family, have been set by the City of Monterey Parks and Recreation Department. There are more than 100 selections to choose from and many are scheduled to begin during the week of June 15-20.

Monterey City residents have first priority to register for the activities and two full weeks have been set aside for this purpose; the dates for Monterey City resident priority registration are through June 1. Non-Monterey residents and late Monterey resident registration begins on June 1.

Summer is the Parks and Recreation Department's biggest and busiest season.

Activities vary in content, meeting day/time, locations, length of session, age, and in fees. Information is summarized in the Summer Activities Guide, a 64-page booklet.

Copies can be picked up at the Department's Administrative office, 546 Dutra St., and at other City Park and Recreation facilities.

Vocalist Clarence Carter joins Monterey Bay Blues Festival line-up

KNOWN FOR his rich, rippling, distinctive upbeat tempo of rhythm and blues, Clarence Carter will entertain listeners this summer at the second annual Monterey Bay Blues Festival on June 27 and 28 at the Monterey Fairgrounds.

Alabama born and raised, Carter originally was headed for the teaching profession. However, after graduating from Alabama State College with a degree in music, the doors opened up and Carter has pursued a career in music ever since.

Starting out with a local gospel group, he soon hooked up with Calvin Scott to form the duo Clarence and Calvin. While they enjoyed some success in the southern states, it wasn't until 1966 when Carter went solo and relocated in Muscle Shoals that fate played a positive hand in his career. Rick Hall of Fame records heard him; liked what he was doing and signed Carter on!

"Tell Daddy," the first release on that label, became a top 10 hit in the summer of 1967. That next year, Carter switched to the Atlantic label and enjoyed five years of uninterrupted hits including "Looking for a Fox," "Slip Away," "Too Weak to Fight," "Snatching It Back," "The Feeling Is Right," "I Can't Leave Your Love Alone," and his 1970 classic, "Patches" — a record that won him international acclaim and opened the door for a worldwide tour.

During the '70s, Clarence Carter played to the disco scene until 1981 when he returned with one of two albums, Let's Burn. He fought his way back to the top ten and led the way for artists such as Z.Z. Hill, Bobby "Blue" Bland, Bobby Womack, Johnnie Taylor and many more.

Clarence joins Bobby "Blue" Bland and many more hit blues artists at the Monterey Bay Blues Festival. Preferred seating tickets are now available and may be purchased by calling 394-2652 or by writing to P.O. Box 1400, Seaside, CA 93955.

A.A. program-Jungian link discussed Friday

IN WHAT WAYS is alcoholism a spiritual problem?

Answers to that question will be addressed at the next event sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung. A panel discussion will begin at 7 p.m. on Friday, June 5, at All Saints' Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel. The program is titled "Beyond the Beginnings."

Highlight of the event will be excerpts from an interview with Thomas Lavin, a senior analyst and faculty member of the C.G. Jung Institute of Chicago. Panelists Mary Ross of Pebble Beach, Barbara Card of Carmel and Joseph Pagano of Monterey will also respond to Dr. Lavin's remarks from a lecture titled "Alcoholism and Depth Psychology."

After a review of Jung's direct and indirect contacts with Bill Wilson (co-founder of Alcoholics Anonymous) the panelists will examine how that organization's famous Twelve Steps can be dramatically affected by Jung's ideas.

For example:

•How can Jung's concept of the "shadow" help blunt the alcoholic's problems of intellectuality, self-righteousness and defiance?

•Would some understanding of personality types help the approach to all 12 steps, but especially 7, 8, 9?

•Can Jung's methods of dream interpretation shed light on taking steps 10, 11 and 12?

This will be the third in a continuing series of discussions showing how the Jung-AA link can be made more effective with explorations of psychological insights that have given new openings to the spiritual dimensions of the AA program.

The public is invited and there is no registration fee.

The Friends of C.G. Jung is a group of people who share enthusiasm for the Swiss psychiatrist's ideas. For further information, call 649-8809, or write 853 Pacific St., Monterey.

CLARENCE CARTER, whose hits include "Slip Away," "Too Weak to Fight" and "The Feeling Is Right," is among the headliners scheduled to perform at the second annual Monterey Bay Blues Festival. The festival arrives June 27-28 at the Monterey Fairgrounds. For ticket information, call 394-2652.

A Visit to Charm School

Nobody, so far as we know, has ever attempted to dissect that fragile quality known as "Carmel Charm." Perhaps nobody should. But if someone should wish to try, he could not find a better model than the house on Casanova, 4 places north of Ocean Avenue.

For example, Carmel charmers never deal with just one surface texture. There's always a combination of stone, siding, brick and/or shingles. Here it's siding on the lower level, shingles above, all pearl grey with yellow trim around the windows and doors.

The stone is saved for the meandering path that winds up the gentle slope from front to back, passing little flower beds divided by small rock walls, reminiscent in miniature of the paddocks in the Yorkshire Dales. The path ends in a shaded stone terrace just outside the dining room.

Nooks and crannies and surprising projections are also part of the Carmel mystique. Inside and out. Nothing is ever massive or gross. Everything is on a cozy, intimate scale. Here, to prove the rule, a 5-window dormer projects from the living room toward the Carmel Bay view framed by Monterey pines. A large half-circle window looks out from the dining room over the garden.

Inside, the rooms are well-planned, with a place for everything and everything in its place. You enter through the dining room, then move through a wide arch to the living room with the traditional red brick fireplace and bookshelves.

Beyond this are 2 bedrooms and 2 baths. There are plenty of windows, tubs and shower and a cozy hallway that brings you to the kitchen. This is finished in wood, board and batten, equipped with all necessary appliances tucked in. Behind this is the charm room, a breakfast area overlooking patio and garden; and a sizeable laundry and pantry.

On the lower level are guest quarters, self contained with living room, bedroom and bath. This is totally private, with its own entrance and its own view of the sea through the trees.

If you walk one short block toward the village, you'll find yourself at the dining room door of the Pine Inn. It's that close to downtown, yet as remote and private as a Carmel cottage should be.

One does not dissect Carmel charm. It's all of a piece; a sort of tantalizing jig-saw puzzle made over a period of time, a warm and comfortable home that takes time to jell. It's $369,500.

CARMEL LEGENDS

No. 19

If you are not familiar with "The Nixon File" in the Harrison Memorial Library, we recommend it to you. The name "Nixon" has nothing to do with the former president, but refers to MRS. D. E. NIXON, a rather formidable lady of great imagination. In 1948, after having lived in Carmel for 25 years, she conceived the heroic task of assembling pictures, letters and memorabilia to record Carmel's history. Three massive cabinets in The Library now contain the results of her labors of love, and they are a gold mine of information. Another Nixon of her time, probably no more related to her than Richard M., was "Nick," a friendly character, who spent most of his time sweeping out the post office and telling stories to people collecting their daily mail. One had to do with his dog, Duke, who chased cats. He'd round up 15 or so in an alley, and when they split up, Duke would "just stand there wondering which one to go after." Nick and Duke may have been a bit confused, but MRS. D.E. knew what she was doing!
